

Tom Cruise was terrified of original Mummy

Los Angeles
Hollywood star Tom Cruise, who features in a new “Mummy” reboot, says the original 1932 film starring Boris Karloff as the monster, had left him terrified.
 Cruise, 54, stars as Navy Seal Tyler Colt in the new “Mummy” reboot, the first film in Universal Studios’ Dark Universe movie series. He was sure he wanted the role when the offer came up because he had vivid childhood memories of watching the original, and being so scared of Karloff’s performance that he had to sleep in the same room as his sisters Lee Anne, Marian and Cass, reported femalefirst.co.uk.
 Talking to “This Morning”, Cruise said: “I loved the old 30s one with Boris Karloff. My three sisters shared a room, I was a guy so I had my own room.” (IANS)

Boutella Joins Michael B. Jordan in ‘Fahrenheit 451’

Sofia Boutella, who will soon be seen as the titular character in The Mummy, has landed another high-profile project: HBO Films’ upcoming movie Fahrenheit 451.

Boutella is playing the female lead, while Michael B. Jordan and Michael Shannon are also starring in the adaptation of the Ray Bradbury classic.

Bradbury’s 1953 novel is set in a futuristic America where books are outlawed and those that are discovered are burned by “firemen.” Jordan will play Montag, a young fireman who forsakes his world, battles his mentor and struggles to regain his humanity. Shannon will portray Beatty, Montag’s captain and mentor.

Boutella will play Clarisse, an informant caught between the competing interests of Montag and Beatty. The award-winning book has been adapted multiple times, including a 1966 film by Francois Truffaut and a 1982 Radio BBC version.

Ramin Bahrani and Amir Naderi (99 Homes) co-wrote HBO’s new take, and Bahrani will also direct the telepic.

Jordan will executive produce via his Outlier Productions. Sarah Green will serve in the same capacity via her Brace Cove Productions. Alan Gasmer and Peter Jaysen will also exec produce, with David Coatsworth set to produce. (hollywoodreporter)
