Education Ministry is currently working on boosting nationalism through its curricula, as instructed by His Majesty King Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa.

The ministry confirmed yesterday that the Royal directives would come into effect within the next two months and in line with the Kingdom's celebrations of the National Day and the anniversary of HM the King's accession to the throne.

In his speech during the opening ceremony of the second session of the fourth legislative term on Sunday, HM the King directed Education Ministry to document the sacrifices of Bahrain Defence Force (BDF), National Guards and Public Security personnel in the existing curricula.

The Royal directives stipulated that such national happenings should be taught to students and the next generations as an appreciation to the soldiers who spared no efforts in protecting the nation.

Education Minister Dr. Majid Al Nuaimi hailed the wise instructions of HM the King, confirming that the ministry will immediately study the means to implement them.

The minister chaired a meeting yesterday with the ministry officials to discuss the best methods to apply HM the King's directives to the ministry, aiming to strengthen the content of the existing curricula with subjects that reinforce national loyalty, belonging, tolerance and moderation.

During the meeting, the minister pledged to strengthen those values in the existing curricula and to support it with school activities that will sure contribute in developing the curricula.

The minister also discussed with the officials the means to document the Kingdom's achievements in all fields and to immortalise the sacrifices of Bahraini soldiers.
