Emma creates new Instagram to promote sustainable fashion

Emma Watson, even when busy in her hectic working schedule is not letting her campaign work effected, as she creates a new Instagram account to promote eco-friendly fashion.

The 26 year-old is using her platform to further the cause of sustainable fashion through her new Instagram account, The Press Tour.

In the first photo she can be seen sporting a coat from the fashion house Stella McCartney, who promotes clothing using regenerated and recycled materials and a jumper from Swedish brand Filippa K.

The theme of sustainable fashion continued in the next posts, where she can be seen wearing an Oscar de La Renta outfit, at the first public screening of 'Beauty and the Beast'.

The whole dress was made in New York City and all the Burberry pumps were handmade in Italy, using organic silk. The feminist campaigner has long been an activist for sustainable fashion and when promoting her 2015 film 'Regression,' where she wore dresses by different fashion designers who use ethical and eco-friendly methods of production at each different event.

Actress Lea Seydoux has revealed that her mother Valerie only realised she was an actress recently.

The 31-year-old actress has starred in a plethora of blockbuster movies including 'Spectre', 'Mission: Impossible - Ghost Protocol' and 'Inglourious Basterds' but says her mother didn't realise she was a movie star for a long time.

"My mother is in this iconic film, but she never wanted to be an actress. Acting is not in our family ... And my father, maybe because his father is in cinema, it is not his thing. He is more into technology. He is like a geek with his glasses and his passion for computers," Seydoux said.

"My mother, I don't think she realised I was doing this job until recently. My mum called me and said, 'Oh, what are you doing now?' I said I was packing to go to Canada to shoot 'Mission: Impossible'. She paused for a moment and said, 'Oh, OK, and when do you come back?' My mother is definitely in her own world.(TOI)

Seydoux didn't tell mother about film career

It has been almost 13 years since the moviegoers were introduced with Lindsay Lohan's Regina George in the cult-film 'Mean Girls' and the actress is leaving no stone unturned to make its sequel happen.

Recently, in an interview, the 30-year-old said, she is totally trying to make 'Mean Girls 2', as the 'Machete' star believes that this story is not over just yet. "I went to Saturday Night Live the other day and I was like harassing Lorne Michaels, I'm like we have to do. I'll write the treatment-If Tina Fey's too busy," she shared.

The actress did get support for the sequel, by SNL's co-host Sara Haines. "Yes, they should. They're smart with timing. It will come when the time is right. It's a great movie. It's a cult film," Lindsay added.

Earlier, she said that she will keep on forcing the idea of a sequel to Tina Fey and Paramount, even if they are busy. The 'Canyons' star even wishes to have Jamie Lee Curtis and Jimmy Fallon in the sequel.(TOI)
