CELEBS

'Deadpool' sequel locks down a release date

A new class of superhero is returning to the big screen! The follow up to the superhero 2016 film 'Deadpool' will hit the theatres on June 1, 2018, Fox announced recently.

The shoot for the sequel is scheduled to begin in June. Ryan Reynolds is all set to reprise his role as the titular superhero in the sequel, while 'John Wick' director David Leitch will sit behind the camera for the project.

The movie has made some new cast additions, recruiting Josh Brolin to play Cable and Zazie Beetz will appear as Domino. This will be second outing for Brolin with Marvel Cinematic Universe as he also portrays Thanos in 'Avengers' franchise.

Rhett Reese and Paul Wernick reunite to write the script, with Drew Goddard assisting on the script as well. (TOI)

Osbourne attacked by sandwich

S inger Kelly Osbourne has revealed that she was once attacked with a Subway sandwich shortly after she came into limelight in 2002.

The 32-year-old shot to fame when her family invited the cameras into their home for their show "The Osbournes", but she says she wasn't prepared for the scrutiny she would receive over her weight. (IANS)

Spielberg's Pentagon Papers film to release

Los Angeles

S teven Spielbergs untitled Pentagon Papers drama, which is rumoured to star Tom Hanks and Meryl Streep, will open in limited release on December 22.

It will expand nationwide on January 12, 2018, a week after the Golden Globes broadcast, reports variety.com. Hanks is said to play Washington Post editor Ben Bradlee, with Streep handling the role of publisher Katharine Graham. (IANS)

Celeb Facts

New Zealand actress Anna Paquin's first television role was as Sookie Stackhouse in HBO show, True Blood, which in 2008 earnt her a Golden Globe for 'Best Actress'.