Restoring pearling history

Murad house, Siyadi Majlis renovation attracts two bids

TDT | Manama

Tender for appointing interior design contractors for restoring the historic Murad House and Siyadi Majlis attracted two bids.

Design Creative (BHD 1,502,679.750) and General Contracting & Trading Services (BHD 1,310,866.050) are the bidders.

However, according to the tender board, the lowest bidder may not necessarily receive the contract, as price shall become the principle criterion only after fulfilling technical and other criteria.

The project is part of preserving old Muharraq, which narrates the history of the Pearling era in Bahrain in line with Pearling, Testimony of an Island Economy.

The contractors are for implementing the final interior finishes, lighting, exhibition tables and showcases, toilet fittings and supplying furniture.

Murad house will function as a guesthouse (Boutique hotel), representing a wish of the family to foster the remembrance of the property as a 'house of hospitality.'

Murad House

Siyadi Majlis will operate as a pearl museum.

Murad House and Murad Majlis are two buildings facing each other on either side of a small public square, separated by a mosque.

Murad House, which belongs to the Murad family - pearl traders (tawawish) for many generations, are still in use today.

The house stands on land received as a gift from the ruler Shaikh Isa bin Ali Al Khalifa at the end of the 19th century.

Constructed of coral stone, they provide the best-preserved and most authentic remaining example of the residence and guesthouse of a tawwash (pearl trader).

As was typical for tawwash complexes, the Murad Majlis is a separate building from the primary family home.

Siyadi complex

The Siyadi family arrived in Bahrain in the early 19th century and settled close to the rulers' houses in the Sh. Abdallah neighbourhood. As grand pearl merchants, the family-owned its pearling fleet. The immense wealth from pearls allowed the family to build the Siyadi complex.

The Siyadi complex consists of three interrelated buildings: Siyadi House, a family residence built by Abdullah bin Isa Siyadi; Siyadi Majlis, a second family residence with an impressive guest room built by Ahmad bin Jassim Siyadi; and Siyadi Mosque, donated to the community by Isa and Jassim bin Ahmad Siyadi.

The exquisitely decorated Siyadi Majlis, the pearling era's only four-storey building, is the jewel of the nominated pearling testimony. Its ground-floor apartments, built-in 1850, are among the earliest stone structures in Muharraq.

While the Siyadi House was built under Ahmad bin Jassim Siyadi, the construction of the Siyadi Majlis was initiated by Ahmad bin Jassim Siyadi. The Siyadi Mosque was a shared initiative of Isa and Jassim bin Ahmad Siyadi.

Siyadi House, dated 1931, is still occupied by the builder's grandson.

The Murad House, located in the corner property of two small alleyways and inaccessible to vehicular traffic, was at one time just 50 metres from the shore.

The architectural and decorative detail of the Murad Majlis is relatively simple compared to the prestigious guest reception rooms built by the grand merchants - and thus credibly documents the status of a tawwash.
