Gulf Air increases flights to Paris to Daily

TDT | Manama

Gulf Air, the national carrier of the Kingdom of Bahrain, will ramp its services to the French capital daily starting today.

This is in line with the latest decision by the French authorities to add Bahrain to their Green List.

Being on the green list will mean that citizens and residents of Bahrain could travel to France without quarantine. Passengers aged 12 and above must present proof of a complete vaccination.

Gulf Air began the summer season with flights to 80% of its pre-pandemic network, and it continued to resume operations and restore services to cities of its original 2019 destination network. The airline currently flies to and from Abu Dhabi, Dubai, Kuwait, Riyadh, Jeddah, Dammam, Medina, Muscat, Cairo, Amman, Casablanca, London, Paris, Frankfurt, Athens, Istanbul, Tbilisi, Larnaca, Bangkok, Manila, Singapore, Dhaka, Colombo, the Maldives and several destinations in India and Pakistan.

Gulf Air’s Acting Chief Executive Officer Captain Waleed AlAlawi said: “This is wonderful news for citizens and residents of the Kingdom of Bahrain to be able to travel on Gulf Air to Paris on our newly introduced Airbus A321neoLR on any day of the week and with relaxed restrictions thanks to the newly announced green list status. Paris has always been a major European point that we have been operating since 1976 and it was one of the destinations we always continued flying to during the pandemic. Starting from the 2nd of August, we are proud to resume our pre-pandemic daily frequency, offering maximum convenience to our passengers.”

India launches e-RUPI

TDT | agencies

Giving a further boost to the digital payment system in the country, Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi launched e-RUPI yesterday.

The electronic voucher-based digital payment system has been developed by the National Payments Corporation of India (NPCI) on its UPI platform, in collaboration with the Department of Financial Services, Ministry of Health & Family Welfare and National Health Authority.

“The launch of e-RUPI is in line with our efforts to make

India a leader in Fintech and leverage technology to boost ‘Ease of Living,”” Modi said in a statement.

He added: “Thanks to technology, things which were earlier deemed impossible have become a reality. Through e-RUPI, numerous tech solutions, particularly in healthcare will be available.”

E-Rupee is a cashless and contactless means of digital payment. It is a QR code or SMS string-based e-voucher, which is delivered to the mobile of the beneficiaries.

With the help of e-RUPI payment service, a user will be able to redeem the voucher without a card, digital payments app, or internet banking access.

How do e-RUPI works?

E-Rupee connects the sponsors of the services with the beneficiaries and service providers in a digital manner without any physical interface. It also ensures that payment is made to the service provider only after the transaction is completed. E-Rupee is pre-paid in nature, so it assures timely payment to the service provider without the involvement of any intermediary.

Where can e-RUPI be used?

It can also be used for delivering services under schemes meant for providing drugs and nutritional support under Mother and Child welfare schemes, TB eradication programmes, drugs & diagnostics under schemes like Ayushman Bharat Pradhan Mantri Jan Arogya Yojana, fertilizer subsidies etc. Even the private sector can leverage these digital vouchers as part of their employee welfare and corporate social responsibility programmes.

The CEO of Arbah Capital, Mahmood Al-Kooheji, said the company is keen to implement the strategy approved by the Board of Directors, which keeps pace with the latest developments in the investment financial industry.

Twitter’s Dorsey leads $29 billion buyout of Afterpay

Reuters | Sydney

Square Inc, the payments firm of Twitter Inc co-founder Jack Dorsey, will purchase buy now, pay later pioneer Afterpay Ltd for $29 billion. The takeover, also the biggest buyout of an Australian firm, underscores the popularity of a business model that has upended consumer credit by charging merchants a fee to offer small point-of-sale loans which their shoppers repay in interest-free instalments, bypassing credit checks.

The deal also locks in a remarkable share-price run for Afterpay, whose stock has surged from A$10 in early 2020 to over A$100 in less than two years.

The all-stock buyout resulted in a payday of A$2.46 bn ($1.81 bn) each for Afterpay’s founders, Anthony Eisen and Nick Molnar. China’s Tencent Holdings Ltd (0700.HK), which paid A$300 million for 5% of Afterpay in 2020, would pocket A$1.7 bn. The Afterpay founders said the deal marked “an important recognition of the Australian technology sector as homegrown innovation continues to be shared more broadly throughout the world”.

Representative Mike McCaul, the top Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, released the report by the panel's Republican staff. It urged a bipartisan investigation into the origins of the COVID-19 coronavirus pandemic that has killed 4.4 million people worldwide. "We now believe it's time to completely dismiss the wet market as the source," said the report. "We also believe the preponderance of the evidence proves the virus did leak from the WIV and that it did so sometime before September 12, 2019." Bahrain's Biodiversity Strategy must change gears

BY KOTA SRIRAJ

The Kingdom of Bahrain has always strived to achieve sustainable economic growth that is in conformity with environmental protection and judicious use of natural resources while ensuring that a stringent check is kept on air and water pollution. The effective government policies and steadfast commitment towards environment has ensured that the stellar economic prosperity of the island nation has not compromised with the many rare species and environmental ecosystems found in Bahrain. This has helped sculpt Bahrain's unique environmental culture and biodiversity on the global arena. But as times change and challenges increase on account of the pandemic and worsening climate change conditions, Bahrain must have a re-look at its biodiversity strategy. This can help the nation insulate its precious biodiversity bank against latest set of man-made threats.

Bahrain's first ambitious National Biodiversity Strategy and Action Plan (NBSAP) was drafted in 2007 which later received some much-required revisions between 2013 and 2015. In fact, Bahrain was one of the very first nations in the region to respond to the initiative launched by the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) calling for embracing the "Ecosystem Based Approach" on the national and regional levels. Furthermore, in 2016 Bahrain worked closely with the United Nations to ensure proper alignment of its NBSAP with the UN's Sustainable Developmental Goals (SDG's). Bahrain is also the first country in the region to establish a "Clearing House Mechanism" for biodiversity, which is essentially a biodiversity database, and an obligation under the Convention on Biological Diversity. With so much of commendable track record to safeguard biodiversity, Bahrain is without doubt effectively implementing its NBSAP.

However times are changing fast and for worse. The ongoing pandemic that has ravaged the world since the beginning of 2020 has changed the narrative on how biodiversity conservation strategies must be developed and implemented. Bahrain must ensure that the erstwhile biodiversity strategies are suitably upgraded and implemented so that the recovery from covid19 is sustainable and resilient from the environmental point of view.

Bahrain's very first implementable NBSAP was not only a testament to the nation's determination to protect its biodiversity, but also endeavoured to improve livelihoods and food security conditions. This was critical as the nation only had 3 per cent arable land. The strategy aimed to restore marine resources and fish stocks to safe and sustainable limits in addition to protecting agricultural lands from urban development which was become a growing problem for the rapidly developing nation. The new version of the biodiversity strategy must evolve keeping in mind the disastrous impact future pandemics can have both on human lives and the environment. Therefore the strategy must be able to pre-empt the future outbreak of zoonotic diseases by factoring in the risk factors and also protecting biodiversity from the diseases and viruses of the future.

The next chapter of the Bahrain's biodiversity protection strategy must contain essential elements such as steps to minimise human and animal interface, eliminating transmission points where the likelihood of viral spill over to humans is high, such as unhygienic commercial markets in wild animal meat and live animals. Additionally, better monitoring to ensure cessation of any type of wildlife commercialisation and parallelly conserving natural habitats can have an immense positive impact in preserving the valuable biodiversity of Bahrain in these trying times. Conserving natural habitats in turn require profound changes in human food production and human encroachment on remaining natural habitats. Incorporating the twin goals of pandemic prevention and nature conservation in the new version of strategy for biodiversity protection, may be a tedious process but will be quite rewarding.

The world is realising fast that an intact biodiversity is key to preventing future outbreak of viruses and diseases such as COVID19. A research survey published recently in The Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS) has concluded that an intact and healthy biodiversity actually protects against the emergence of new infectious diseases by keeping the handful of species most likely to spread diseases in check. The policies and strategies must be recalibrated to ensure that biodiversity is given sufficient importance and protection so that it does its job in preventing outbreak of more diseases. Nature is better at controlling the dangerous species that give rise to pandemic such as COVID19 all it needs is a healthy biodiversity to do this. Bahrain already has an excellent biodiversity conservation strategy in place, it just needs to factor in pandemic prevention aspects in the strategy to make it future proof.

A research survey published recently in The Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences (PNAS) has concluded that an intact and healthy biodiversity actually protects against the emergence of new infectious diseases by keeping the handful of species most likely to spread diseases in check.

Veteran Egyptian actress Azizk critical after contracting COVID, preparing for lung transplant

● Her family is yet to agree on the transplant

TDT | agencies

Veteran Egyptian actress Dalal Abdel Azizk reportedly is preparing for a lung transplant after her condition worsened due to complications from a COVID-19 infection.

An Archyde report, quoting informed medical sources, say the star actress, suffering from lung fibrosis, is also not aware of the death of her husband Samir Ghanem, who also had the infection.

The couple contracted the virus three months back and has been in treatment since then.

Archyde report also claims that her family is yet to agree on the transplant for fear of her recovery.

"Her family is afraid to agree to the lung transplant proposal due to the difficulty and danger of this process," the report adds.

Meanwhile, social media went abuzz with rumours of her death during the past few days.

Refuting rumours, Egyptian anchor Ramy Radwan, the husband of Azizk daughter and actress Donia Samir Ghanem, told the media that his mother-in-law's "situation is difficult, not easy, and there is no improvement...every little surprise happens."

He urged news outlets and journos not to spread "news of death" without being "200% certain."

Understand "the circumstances of the family and the challenges they face," he said during his show DMC Evening.

The family, he said, is "trying to cross the bottleneck and a difficult stage, and please don't add wound on another wound."

Aziz was undergoing treatment in a private hospital but is now in a government hospital.

An Albawaba report claims that the ailing actress received a shocking bill for $95,600 for her 90-day stay at the private hospital. The report, quoting unnamed medical sources, further confirms that decision to transfer her to a government hospital "was a pure family procedure."

Tunisia's powerful parliament speaker Ghannouchi leaves

● Ghannouchi, 80, has led opposition to last week's move by President Kais Saied to seize governing powers

● Ghannouchi was taken to hospital briefly on Saturday and later discharged

Reuters | Tunis

Tunisia's parliament speaker Rached Ghannouchi, head of the moderate Islamist Ennahda party that has had an influential national role for a decade, left the hospital hours after he was admitted on Sunday, two advisers said, in the midst of a major political crisis.

Ghannouchi, 80, has led opposition to last week's move by President Kais Saied to seize governing powers, dismiss the prime minister and freeze parliament, steps that the Ennahda leader quickly branded a coup.

His advisers did not say what was wrong with Ghannouchi, who was hospitalised for a week last month with COVID-19.

"After a few hours in the military hospital, Ghannouchi returned home and he is finenow", an advisor said.

Suppressed before the 2011 revolution that introduced democracy, Ennahda has since then been the most consistently powerful political party, backing successive coalition governments and helping to agree the 2014 constitution.

However, economic stagnation, declining services and a public perception of increased corruption have dented its support and Saied's sudden declaration on Sunday appears to have widespread backing.

Ghannouchi, who was also taken to hospital briefly on Saturday and later discharged, faces internal dissent within Ennahda over both his handling of the immediate crisis and his strategic choices since the 2019 election.

Delta spreads 'like wildfire' as doctors study whether it makes patients sicker

● Delta is as contagious as chickenpox and far more contagious than the common cold or flu, according to the CDC report.

Reuters | Los Angeles

With a new wave of COVID-19 infections fuelled by the Delta variant striking countries worldwide, disease experts are scrambling to learn whether the latest version of coronavirus is making people - mainly the unvaccinated - sicker than before.

The US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention warned that Delta, first identified in India and now dominant worldwide, is "likely more severe" than earlier versions of the virus, according to an internal report made public on Friday.

The agency cited research in Canada, Singapore and Scotland showing that people infected with the Delta variant were more likely to be hospitalized than patients earlier in the pandemic.

In interviews with Reuters, disease experts said the three papers suggest a greater risk from the variant, but the study populations are limited and the findings have not yet been reviewed by outside experts. Doctors treating patients infected with Delta described a more rapid onset of COVID-19 symptoms, and in many regions an overall increase serious cases.

But the experts said more work is needed to compare outcomes among larger numbers of individuals in epidemiologic studies to sort out whether one variant causes more severe disease than another.

"It's difficult to pin down increase in severity and population bias," said Lawrence Young, a virologist at the UK's Warwick Medical School.

In addition, it is likely that the extraordinary rate of Delta transmission is also contributing to a greater number of severe cases arriving at hospitals, the experts said.

Delta is as contagious as chickenpox and far more contagious than the common cold or flu, according to the CDC report.

Shane Crotty, a virologist at the La Jolla Institute for Immunology in San Diego, said the clearest indication that the variant may cause more severe disease comes from the Scotland study, which found that Delta roughly doubled the risk of hospitalization compared to an earlier version.

For vaccinated, otherwise healthy individuals, the odds are that if they contract COVID-19 they will only experience asymptomatic or mild disease, said Dr. Gregory Poland, infectious disease expert at the Mayo Clinic.

"But they can pass it on to family members and others who may not be so lucky," Poland said. "We have to be vaccinated and masked or we will, for the fourth time now, endure another surge and out of that will come worse variants."

The majority of hospitalizations and deaths from coronavirus in the United States are occurring in people who have not been vaccinated. But there is evidence that the shots are less effective in people with compromised immune systems, including the elderly.

'FULL-ON FLAMES'

The rate of severe illness, especially in regions where vaccination rates are low, is again straining healthcare workers on the front lines of the pandemic.

"This is like a wildfire, this is not a smoldering campfire. It is full-on flames right now," said Dr. Michelle Barron, senior medical director of infection prevention and control at Colorado's UCHealth.

Research from China suggesting that the Delta variant replicates much faster and generates 1,000 times more virus in the body compared to the original strain highlights the biggest danger of this new wave, Barron said.

US to take in thousands more Afghan refugees

● President Joe Biden has ordered a withdrawal of remaining US troops by the end of the month, ending the longest war in US history

● Biden administration acknowledges fears for the stability of the internationally backed government

AFP | Washington

The United States said yesterday it will take in thousands more Afghan refugees, fearing for the safety of people with US associations as America ends its longest war.

The State Department said it will expand the eligibility of refugee admissions beyond the roughly 20,000 Afghans who have already applied -- with some being evacuated out -- under a programme for interpreters who assisted US forces.

"In light of increased levels of Taliban violence, the US government is working to provide certain Afghans, including those who worked with the United States, the opportunity for refugee resettlement to the United States," the State Department said in a statement.

Afghan internally displaced families arrive in Kandahar as they flee battles between Taliban fighters and Afghan security forces

"This designation expands the opportunity to permanently resettle in the United States to many thousands of Afghans and their immediate family members who may be at risk due to their US affiliation," it said.

The State Department said that the expanded eligibility will include Afghans who worked with US-based media organizations or non-governmental organizations or on projects backed by US funding.

The State Department will also let in more Afghans who served as interpreters or in other support roles to forces of the US-led coalition but did not meet earlier requirements on time served.

The State Department is designating Afghan refugees with US affiliations under so-called Priority 2, the same level given to persecuted minorities from a number of countries.

President Joe Biden has ordered a withdrawal of remaining US troops by the end of the month, ending the longest war in US history.

With the Taliban going on the offensive, the Biden administration acknowledges fears for the stability of the internationally backed government.

But it insists that the United States has done all that it can and has accomplished its priority mission of eliminating al-Qaeda extremists who carried out the September 11, 2001 attacks.

India's monsoon rains forecast to be average in August, September

Reuters | New Delhi

India is likely to receive an average amount of rainfall in August and September, the state-run weather office said yesterday, raising expectations of higher crop yields in Asia's third-biggest economy, which relies heavily on the vast farm sector.

"As per most parameters, we expect monsoon rains to be normal in August and September this year," Mrutyunjay Mohapatra, Director General of the India Meteorological Department (IMD), told a news conference.

The IMD defines average, or normal, rainfall as between 96% and 104% of a 50-year average of 88 cms (34 inches) for the four-month season beginning in June.

In August, monsoon rains are likely to be "below normal to normal" in the central region, Mohapatra said, where soybean and cotton are grown.

Farmers generally start planting rice, corn, cotton, soybeans, sugarcane and peanuts, among other crops, from June 1, when monsoon rains typically arrive in India. Sowing usually lasts until July or early August.

Indian farmers have planted summer-sown crops on 84.8 million hectares, down 4.7% year-on-year, according to the latest data from the Ministry of Agriculture & Farmers' Welfare.

The area planted with cotton stood at 11 million hectares versus 12.1 million hectares the previous year, while soybean covered 9.3 million hectares, down 3.4% from a year earlier.

After lashing the southernmost Kerala coast on June 3, the monsoon spread to two-thirds of India by the end of the first half of the month, nearly 15 days earlier than expected. And then it tapered off in the third week of June.

While monsoon rains were still 10% above average in June, they turned 7% below average in July. Overall rains have been 1% below average so far in the season that began in June.

In June, the IMD said India was likely to receive average monsoon rains this year, boosting expectations for larger farm output amid a devastating second wave of COVID-19 infections.

Belarus sprinter granted Polish visa after refusing to go home

● Krystsina Tsimanouskaya, 24, would seek asylum in Poland

● The European Union welcomed Poland's decision

● Her husband, Arseni Zhdanovich, will join her in Poland

A Belarusian athlete who took refuge in the Polish embassy in Tokyo on Monday, a day after refusing her team's orders to board a flight home from the Olympic Games, has been granted a humanitarian visa by the Warsaw government.

Sprinter Krystsina Tsimanouskaya plans to leave for Poland in the coming days, a Polish deputy foreign minister, Marcin Przydacz, told Reuters. She is "safe and in good condition" after walking into the embassy on Monday morning, he said.

Another deputy foreign minister, Pawel Jablonski, said: "I can confirm that we have issued a humanitarian visa. I can confirm that we will provide all necessary support in Poland if she wishes to use it."

Tsimanouskaya, 24, had been due to compete in the women's

Belarusian athlete Krystsina Tsimanouskaya

In March, the IOC refused to recognise the election of Lukashenko's son Viktor as head of the country's Olympic Committee. Both father and son were banned from attending the Games in December.

200 metre heats on Monday but said that on Sunday she was taken to the airport to board a Turkish Airlines flight.

She refused, telling Reuters: "I will not return to Belarus."

The European Union welcomed Poland's decision and said the repatriation attempt was further evidence of "brutal repression" by Belarusian President Alexander Lukashenko.

"We express our full solidarity to Krystsina Tsimanouskaya and commend the (EU) member states that offered her support," EU spokeswoman Nabila Massarali said.

The incident has focussed attention on Belarus, where police have cracked down on dissent following a wave of protests triggered by an election last year which the opposition says was rigged to keep Lukashenko in power. The athlete arrived at the Polish embassy in an unmarked silver van about 5 p.m. local time

She stepped out with her official team luggage, and greeted two officials before going inside.

Two women, one carrying the red and white flag seen as the symbol of opposition in Belarus, came to the gates to support her.

POLICE PROTECTION

Her husband, Arseni Zhdanovich, will join her in Poland, a Warsaw-based Belarusian opposition politician said.

"Thanks to the support of the Belarusian Athletes' Solidarity Foundation, (Tsimanouskaya's) husband is in Kyiv and he will join Krystsina," Pavel Latushko told Reuters.

Zhdanovich had already entered Ukraine, a Ukrainian interior ministry source said.

A Belarusian opposition politician said Belarus officials had told Tsimanouskaya's mother that her daughter was a spy for Western governments.

Pavel Latushko, who lives in Warsaw, told Reuters Tsimanouskaya had told him via text message that her mother had been approached by someone from Lukashenko's office and asked to persuade the athlete to come home.

Tsimanouskaya told a Reuters reporter via Telegram that the Belarusian head coach had turned up at her room on Sunday at the athletes' village and told her she had to leave.

"The head coach came over to me and said there had been an order from above to remove me," she wrote in the message. "At 5 (pm) they came my room and told me to pack and they took me to the airport."

But she refused to board and sought the protection of Japanese police.

Tsimanouskaya said she had been removed from the team as she had spoken out about what she described as the negligence of their coaches.

She had complained on Instagram that she was entered in the 4x400 m relay after some team members were found to be ineligible to compete at the Olympics because they had not undergone sufficient doping tests.

"And the coach added me to the relay without my knowledge," Tsimanouskaya said.

The Belarusian Olympic Committee said coaches had decided to withdraw Tsimanouskaya from the Games on doctors' advice about her "emotional, psychological state".

Belarus athletics head coach Yuri Moisevich told state television he "could see there was something wrong with her ... She either secluded herself or didn't want to talk".

Earlier on Monday, International Olympic Committee spokesperson Mark Adams said officials would continue conversations with Tsimanouskaya and had asked for a full report from the Belarus Olympic committee.

The Japanese government said she had been kept safe while Tokyo 2020 organisers and the IOC checked her intentions.

US, UK embassies in Afghanistan accuse Taliban of possible war crimes

Reuters | Kabul

The US and British embassies in Kabul said on Monday the insurgent Taliban may have committed war crimes in southern Afghanistan by carrying out revenge murders of civilians, a charge denied by the insurgents.

Suhail Shaheen, a Taliban negotiating team member based in Doha, told Reuters that tweets containing the accusations were "baseless reports."

The US Embassy in the capital Kabul tweeted a statement accusing the Taliban of killing dozens of civilians in the area of Spin Boldak in southern Kandahar province. The statement was also tweeted by the British embassy.

"These murders could constitute war crimes; they must be investigated & those Taliban fighters or commanders responsible held accountable," the U.S.

Embassy tweeted.

In a second tweet, it said: "The Taliban's leadership must be held responsible for the crimes of their fighters. If you cannot control your fighters now, you have no business in governance later."

The tweets, accompanied by calls for a ceasefire, stepped up the United States' public criticism of the group as U.S. troops withdraw and the Taliban goes on the offensive.

U.S. Secretary of State Antony Blinken said last week that Afghanistan would become a 'pariah state' if any future Taliban rule in Afghanistan resulted in atrocities against civilians.

The insurgents gained control last month of the strategic area of Spin Boldak, which lies at a border and trade crossing with Pakistan, and heavy fighting has taken place since as Afghan forces try to recapture the area.

Beyonce’s ‘Formation’ named as best music video of all time

ANI | Washington

‘Formation’, the song recorded by American popstar Beyonce for her sixth studio album Lemonade (2016), has become the best music video of all time. According to Page Six, ‘Formation’ secured the No. 1 spot on a list of 100 music videos ranked by Rolling stone magazine. The video, released in 2016 and directed by Melina Matsoukas, pushed other iconic music videos like Michael Jackson’s ‘Billie Jean’, Prince’s ‘Kiss’, and Lady Gaga’s ‘Bad Romance’ aside. Orleans and a wall with the words “stop shooting us” spray-painted on it. According to the magazine’s director Matsoukas, the 39-year-old singer wanted the video to show the “historical impact of slavery on black love, and what it has done to the black family,” as she explained to The New Yorker in 2017.

“I wanted to show -- this is black people. We triumph, we suffer, we’re drowning, we’re being beaten, we’re dancing, we’re eating, and we’re still here,” Matsoukas added while discussing the ‘Formation’ video’s concept. As per Page Six, critics categorized the video, and Beyonce as “anti-police.” Beyonce denied the accusations in an interview with Elle claiming that anyone who truly believed she was “anti-police” was wrong. “I’m an artist and I think the most powerful art is usually misunderstood, but anyone who perceives my message as anti-police is completely mistaken. I have so much admiration and respect for officers and the families of officers who sacrifice themselves to keep us safe,” the mother of three told Elle in April 2016. The singer also explained that the message behind ‘Formation’ was “I am against police brutality and injustice. Those are two separate things.”

The Grammy-winner talked about the online hate and trolling she gets despite her attempts to do “good for people”. “I try so hard to do good for the world and good for people. American pop sensation Britney Spears on Saturday (local time) shared a cryptic post on social media referring to ending relationships with people involved directly or indirectly in her conservatorship. Britney posted a simple message on her Instagram handle saying “If standing up for yourself burns a bridge, I have matches” - a reference to ending relationships, something she has been doing recently. In addition to going after her dad, Jamie, she has zeroed in on her mom and sister, among many others. Through her message, she seems to be saying that she is not afraid to torch relationships that have harmed her over the years. Britney also posted pictures of her recent trip to Maui, talking about “the little things” she enjoys. One of the pictures shows what appears to be her cocktail of choice, held by her boyfriend Sam Asghari. Her posts include the image of a statue of a “rare white owl,” with the caption .. “Pssss check out the statue of the rare white owl ... I saw it this morning !!!! Before I saw it, a beautiful little boy with white-blond hair who was two years old screamed at his mamma because he wanted his drink with a straw ... it was the most adorable thing ever cause he reminded me of my boys when they were younger.” On a related note, as per TMZ, Britney and her lawyer, Matt Rosengart, have been mounting a full-court press to remove Jamie from the conservatorship, a prelude to asking the judge to end the conservatorship, which has been up and running for more than 13 years.

Said Maleem knocks out Fakhreddine at BRAVE CF 52

Mohamed Said Maleem puts bad blood behind to claim Light Heavyweight world title

● Chsiev stops hometown hero Cortese

TDT | Manama

It was a lead-up based on bad blood. It was all over the place, including on the event's tagline. But at the end of BRAVE CF 52 in Milan, Italy there was nothing but cordiality and respect, and, of course, the supreme glory for Mohamed Said Maalem, the new BRAVE CF 52 Light Heavyweight champion of the world.

Following months of back-and-forth public statements, social media war of words, and lots of anticipation, Said Maleem showed resilience, in addition to his traditional firepower, to emerge victorious and claim the vacant 93kg belt with a first-round KO over the reigning Middleweight champion Fakhreddine.

After the fight, in a long speech given in both Arabic and French, and subsequently translated to English by his team, "L'Ambiance" tried to smooth things over with Fakhreddine.

"I have no issue with Fakhreddine, at all. We are brothers before God, he's a good man, and I like to think I am too. I respect him, his team, and his country of Lebanon. The only thing in my mind now is happiness, happiness for becoming the world champion", he said.

Fakhreddine, who failed on his plans to become BRAVE CF's first double champion, adopted a similar tone, but used his time on the mic to mention a personal drama he went through moments after the fight and also the most controversial moment of the fight, the alleged illegal shots on the back of the head he suffered during the TKO.

"I don't mean it as an excuse but I just heard that a huge friend of mine got shot and killed, like 3 hours before the event. It was devastating. I was hit on the back of the head too a few times, the ref didn't see it. But it is what it is. I want to congratulate Said Maalem for his world title", Fakhreddine stated.

The fight

When the bell rang, Said Maalem went for an early takedown, Fakhreddine tried a guillotine choke and managed to stand up. When they were clinched, Fakhreddine complained about a groin shot but the referee Dec Larkin let the fight proceed. Less than a minute later, though, the referee stopped the fight due to a now undisputable low blow.

Fakhreddine recovered quickly and went for it right away, combining vicious leg kicks that slowed Maalem down and powerful strikes to the head, which promptly forced Maalem to shoot for a takedown.

They scrambled and fought on the fence and then Said Maalem showed great sense of urgency, seizing the opportunity and connecting a short left hook that dropped Fakhreddine. With his opponent down, L'Ambiance engaged determined to finish the fight right there and connected multiple strikes until the fight was finally stopped.

These final seconds also led to the most controversial moment of the fight, with Fakhreddine claiming he got hit on the back of the head by Said Maleem a few times.

With a little bit more than 30 seconds on the clock in the first round, the referee stepped in and stopped the fight. Said Maalem got his 8th KO victory and his first MMA world title at age 37.

At Chsiev's terms

BRAVE CF 52 was a night of highlights, beautiful finishes and exciting fights from the bottom to the top and that was also true in the co-main event of the evening.

Sadly for the Italians, though, the home fighter Enrico Cortese wasn't the one producing the highlights, but the victim in his opponent Rustam Chsiev's one.

The two men started at full throttle, putting everything on each single strike. Such incredible pace wasn't sustainable for the whole fight, so Chsiev brought the fight to his own terms and took Cortese down -- the first of many times within only five minutes.

In fact, Chsiev did so every time he needed to, like when Cortese managed to bring the fight back up and started swinging and connecting at him.

On the ground and with time on the clock, Chsiev worked his way through a full mount, from which he managed to inflict huge damage on Cortese.

The Italian was able to stand up but was mauled to the ground once again, absorbing an enormous amount of strikes in the process. For a moment, it seemed that the fight was going to be stopped but Cortese was saved by the bell.

That didn't last long either, during the break between rounds, the doctors deemed Cortese unfit to continue due to an injury on his arm and Rustam Chsiev confirmed his 5th professional win, the third consecutive inside the BRAVE CF Arena.

Kane skips Spurs return amid Man City transfer talk

AFP | London

Harry Kane reportedly failed to turn up for his scheduled pre-season tests with Tottenham yesterday amid mounting speculation the striker wants to force a move to Manchester City.

England captain Kane was due back at Tottenham's training headquarters for a coronavirus test and a fitness assessment following his three-week holiday after Euro 2020.

However, it was widely re-

Tottenham, who ironically face Pep Guardiola's team on the opening weekend of the new Premier League season, have declined to comment about Kane's absence.

The 28-year-old went public with his desire to leave Tottenham at the end of last season.

Kane has grown frustrated at Tottenham's failure to win a major trophy since 2008, with their latest letdown coming in last season's League Cup final defeat against Manchester City.

He believes he has a 'gentleman's agreement' with Tottenham which allows him to move this year.

But with three years left on his contract, Tottenham chairman Daniel Levy has no intention of selling his club's prized asset, who is valued at around £150 million ($208 million).

Hassan launches treble bid with gold

● Sifan Hassan wins Olympic 5,000m in first step in treble gold bid

TDT | Manama

Dutch runner Sifan Hassan stayed on course for a historic Olympic treble with a brilliant victory in the 5,000m yesterday.

Ethiopia-born Hassan put on a masterclass in distance running to claim gold, surging clear of the field with around 250 metres to go in a time of 14min 36.79sec. Kenya's Hellen Obiri took silver while Ethiopia's Gudaf Tsegay collected bronze.

The win means Hassan's dreams of claiming three gold medals in Tokyo -- the 1,500m, 5,000m and 10,000m -- remain very much alive.

Yesterday night's stirring 5,000m victory capped a remarkable day for Hassan, who only 12 hours before had produced an improbable comeback to advance from her opening 1,500m heat.

Hassan's treble hopes looked to be in jeopardy after she dramatically tumbled to the track after a heavy collision at the start of the last lap.

But she picked herself up and produced a devastating turn of speed over the final 350 metres to finish first and advance.

"It has been an amazing day," said Hassan after her 5,000m win. "When I fell down and had to jump up I felt like I was using so much energy."

"I can't believe it. I used all my energy this morning and I was kind of tired. I felt terrible afterwards and I never thought I am going to be Olympic champion."

Hassan's victory was one of five gold medals decided on day four of the Olympic track and field competition.

It completed a fairytale redemption story for Camacho-Quinn, who had exited the 2016 Olympics in tears when she crashed out in the semi-finals after falling at the last hurdle.

"For such a small country it gives little people hope," Camacho-Quinn said. "I wanted to be a gold medalist and I manifested that. I spoke it into existence." Harrison claimed silver in 12.52sec while Jamaica's Megan Tapper took bronze in 12.55sec.

Jamaican sprint duo look strong in 200 metres

Defending champion Elaine Thompson-Herah and fellow Jamaican Shelly-Ann Fraser-Pryce laid down the gauntlet to the young pretenders in the Olympic women's 200 metres yesterday, delivering emphatic performances in their semi-finals.

Thompson-Herah, seeking a second successive Olympics sprint double after bagging the 100m gold on Saturday, looked in third gear throughout but still matched her personal best of 21.66 seconds, from lane nine.

Fraser-Pryce, 200m silver medalist in 2012 and silver winner in the 100 in Tokyo, has barely run the 200 since winning the world title in 2013. After a very comfortable morning heats run she upped the effort to win the opening semi in 22.13.

World leader Gabby Thomas, whose 22.61 at the U.S. trials made her the second-fastest in history behind Florence Griffith-Joyner, also looked sharp in 22.01.

China edge out Germany to win first velodrome gold

China clinched the first track cycling gold medal of the Tokyo Olympics in the women's team sprint yesterday and set a new world record as Germany took silver on a dramatic first day at the Izu Velodrome.

Australia's Alexander Porter also suffered a nasty crash during qualifying for the men's team pursuit after his handlebars snapped off, while Germany smashed a world record in the women's event to advance as favourites for gold on Tuesday.

It meant some consolation for the German team, who were edged out in the women's team sprint final by Chinese pair Bao Shanju and Zhong Tianshi.

Bao and Zhong had earlier broken China's own world record with a time of 31.804sec in the heats and they were too quick in the final, their 31.895 just ahead of Germany's 31.980. The Russian Olympic Committee beat the Netherlands to take bronze.

Canada stun US to set up final with Sweden

Canada stunned world champions the United States yesterday, handing them a shock 1-0 defeat in the semi-finals of the women's Olympic football tournament to set up a clash with Sweden in Friday's showpiece match.

The Swedes beat Australia 1-0 thanks to a 46th minute goal from Fridolina Rolfö to return to the final after their silver medal in Rio five years ago.

Canada celebrated their first win over the US in over 20 years after Jessie Fleming's 75th minute penalty settled the contest.

The crucial moment, in a game which had produced little incident, came when US defender Tierna Davidson challenged Deanne Rose on the edge of the penalty area. After a video review, a spot kick was awarded.

Canada's veteran striker Christian Sinclair initially had the ball in her hands, but Fleming took the responsibility and kept her cool to slot home.

The US, pre-Games favourites for the gold medal, went close to an equaliser when Carli Lloyd struck the bar with a header but Canada held on for a famous victory - and their first appearance in an Olympic final.

The Americans have won the gold medal four times and have not lost to Canada for over 20 years. It is only the fourth time the Canadians have beaten their neighbours in 62 meetings.
