Robert Pattinson ate ‘nothing but salmon’ for months

Bang Showbiz | Los Angeles

Robert Pattinson has “eaten nothing but salmon” for months.

The ‘Batman’ actor insisted he’s “like a kid” with needing a routine when he’s busy working on film sets, and recently he was having salmon for every meal of the day.

He told GQ magazine: “I’m kind of like a kid. I’m doing a lot of jobs in a row and I get very obsessed about needing to have regimented behavior — otherwise I’d feel crazy afterwards.

“But I was having lunch yesterday and I was like, I can’t taste salmon anymore. And I realised I’ve eaten nothing but salmon for like, months.

“It’s like I have a seal’s diet: I genuinely have been eating salmon three times a day.”

The 38-year-old star is no stranger to a fish-based diet, and he recalled a time where he would only tuck into canned tuna on film sets.

He said: “I used to only eat tuna out of a can when I was working — I just put Cholula hot sauce on a can of tuna.

“Someone saw me doing it once and they were like, that’s absolutely disgusting.

“And then suddenly I kind of got afraid of mercury poisoning, so I switched to salmon. Someone told me I could just get mercury poisoning from salmon anyway. But yeah: I endorse.”

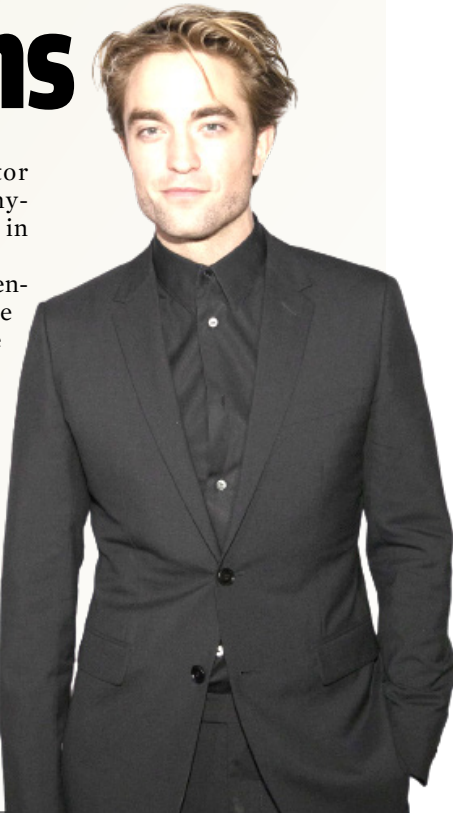

The ‘Twilight Saga’ actor joked he also supports “hyper-loading caffeine” early in the day.

He quipped: “I definitely endorse hyper-loading caffeine right at the beginning of the day. You just need to basically live your entire day in a kind of manic state.

“But I can’t do Celsius — it’s too much. That feels like I’ve kind of gotten on a roller coaster and I can’t get off it.

“My favorite thing is instant coffee, more than anything else. It’s very English. I like it when it looks like oil — that’s what my espresso is, just barely dissolved coffee granules.”

Bradley Cooper asked Amy Schumer if she was 50

Bradley Cooper thought Amy Schumer was 50 years old.

The Hollywood star celebrated his 50th birthday on January 5, and he mistakenly asked Amy whether she’d already reached the milestone.

During an appearance on ‘The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon’, Amy shared: “I saw him, and you know, ‘how are you?’, and he said ‘You know, I turned 50 this year’ and he goes, ‘You 50?’”

Amy recalled being shocked by Bradley’s question.

The comedian continued: “I tried to recover - you know, I’m 43 - so I’m like, ‘I will be 50! But I’m not 50 yet! Yeah no, I’m not, Bradley, but thank you for thinking of me!’”

Amy also revealed that she’s often mistaken for fellow comedy stars Melissa McCarthy and Rebel Wilson.

She said: “I don’t correct them. I just go, ‘Yeah, ‘Bridesmaids’ changed my life.’”

Amy previously confessed to having a big crush on Bradley.

The actress said on ‘The Tonight Show’ back in 2015: “I always harass him. I feel very uncomfortable talking to somebody that handsome.

“He’s very charismatic and stares into your eyes and asks you questions, which no man does.”

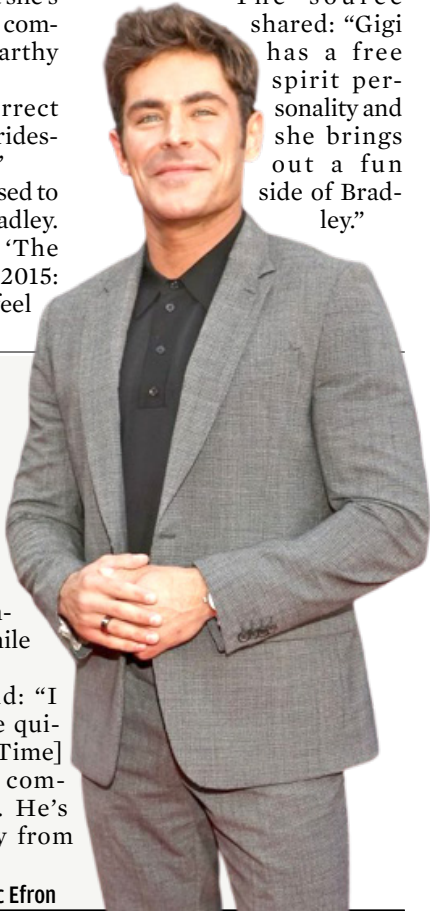

Meanwhile, Bradley has been dating model Gigi Hadid since late 2023, and a source recently revealed that the celebrity duo are “very happy together”.

The loved-up couple are “serious about each other”, but they aren’t in any rush to get engaged.

The insider told PEOPLE: “Neither are looking to rush anything, but that’s not to say they’re not very happy together.”

Bradley and Gigi, 29 - who dated music star Zayn Malik between 2015 and 2021 - feel like their personalities are very complementary.

The source shared: “Gigi has a free spirit personality and she brings out a fun side of Bradley.”

Drew Barrymore ‘not ready’ for another relationship

Bang Showbiz | Los Angeles

Drew Barrymore is “not ready” for another relationship and only goes on dates “occasionally”.

The 49-year-old actress-turned-TV host has been married three times - to Jeremy Thomas, Tom Green and Will Kopelman - and is mother to two daughters with her third husband but she’s stepped away from the dating scene since her last divorce in 2016 and now admits she’s not committed to finding love again.

She told AARP The Magazine: “I date occasionally, but no way am I ready to open that door ... My girls say I should go on dates, but I also know how I felt when men were around when I was little - it didn’t feel safe to me, so I’m probably overcautious from those experiences.”

Drew went on to talk about stepping away from Hollywood to focus on her family - and admits she has no regrets about giving up her movie career.

She said: “I was in my early 40s, and not learning how to be my own healthy, independent individual, how to be the parent I dream to be.

“Being other people doesn’t help me figure that out right now. And the long hours of doing films were hours I wouldn’t have with my kids. I wasn’t going to do that.”

She added of her split from Kopelman: “My dream family was falling apart and I didn’t know how to put one foot in front of the other. And I had grown up so fast but now I didn’t know what age to feel - I just knew that my life was heavy, and painful and sad - and I sat in that for a while.

“Eventually, thank goodness, I lifted myself out of it. I had two kids and I had to figure it out.”

Drew previously opened up about her decision to quit Hollywood in a 2023 interview with the Los Angeles Times, insisting she is still not ready to come back yet.

She told the publication: “I just need to be myself. I struggle to be someone else. But I just can’t see acting right now.

Zac Efron ‘would be the perfect partner on Dancing with the Stars’

Bang Showbiz | Los Angeles

Britt Stewart thinks Zac Efron would be the “perfect” partner on ‘Dancing with the Stars’.

The 35-year-old dancer previously worked with Zac, 37, on the ‘High School Musical’ film franchise, and she’d love to reunite with the Hollywood star on the hit TV series.

Asked to name her dream celebrity partner, Britt told Us Weekly: “I don’t think he would ever do this, but because I got my start with ‘High School Musical’ I have to say Zac Efron.”

Britt is convinced that Zac would be a huge success on ‘Dancing with the Stars’.

The professional dancer - who has previously toured with the likes of Demi Lovato, Rihanna and Selena Gomez - has also admitted to being wowed by Zac’s dance moves.

Britt - who is engaged to actor Daniel Durant - said: “It would just be the best reunion ever. But also everyone would literally lose their mind.

“He’d win [and] he’s a great dancer so I think he would be the perfect person.”

Britt is currently on the ‘Dancing With the Stars’ tour, and she’s using any spare time she has to plan her wedding.

The dancer and Daniel are set to tie the knot later this year, and she’s enjoying the experience of planning her big day.

She shared: “It’s been great to balance. I also think it keeps my mind fresh, too - that I get to focus on this big moment in both Daniel and I’s life that we’re so looking forward to this year.”

What’s more, Britt revealed that she’s always in contact with Daniel while she’s on the road.

The TV star said: “I don’t need it to be quiet [when we FaceTime] because we just communicate in ASL. He’s part of the family from afar.”
