transformation, inclusivity in modern destinations, and the regional response to climate change.

Reports

Officials also discussed progress reports from the Arab Tourism Observatory and the Arab Tourism Innovation Observatory, and considered the selection of the Arab Tourism Capital for 2026.

H.E. Al Sairafi said Bahrain's presence in Baghdad reflects the outcomes of the 33rd Arab Summit, which Bahrain hosted in 2024 and which emphasised coordinated Arab efforts to promote sustainable destinations and support tourism investment.

The Minister reiterated that Bahrain will continue to align regional decisions with the Kingdom's Tourism Strategy 2022–2026 and the broader Bahrain Economic Vision 2030.

During the meetings Bahrain's delegation outlined concrete progress on initiatives previously adopted at the regional level, notably the establishment of a smart tourism facility and measures to diversify tourism products under the Arab Tourism Strategy.

The Istanbul Protocol remains the leading international reference for documenting allegations of torture and ill-treatment

Mohammed Darwish
TDT | Manama

A specialised workshop on the revised Istanbul Protocol opened yesterday at the Judicial and Legal Studies Institute, with the aim of improving how allegations of torture and ill-treatment are documented and examined in Bahrain.

The event, organised by the Special Investigation Unit, brings together representatives from bodies involved in law enforcement and criminal justice, as well as a number of civil society organisations.

His Excellency Attorney General Dr Ali bin Fadhel Al Buainain opened the workshop.

Sessions

Organisers said the sessions introduce the Istanbul Protocol and its 2022 revised edition, setting out the main changes from the earlier version.

The programme also focuses on practical skills for documenting cases in line with international standards and on closer coordination between the bodies involved.

In his opening remarks, Dr Al Buainain said Bahrain has made major progress in protecting human rights through updated legislation, supported by independent national institutions and established policies that reinforce respect for human dignity.

He said these steps have helped develop the criminal justice system by activating oversight and accountability measures and by building preventive checks within law enforcement.

He also praised the Special Investigation Unit's ongoing work to bring its methods into line with international standards through training, specialised events and organisational development, describing this as a way to strengthen trust in its procedures and to support investigations based on professionalism and impartiality.

Acting Chief Public Prosecutor and Head of the Special Investigation Unit Mohammed Khalid Al Hazzaa said the Istanbul Protocol remains the leading international reference for documenting allegations of torture and ill-treatment.

Justice

He said the 2022 update keeps pace with advances in science and human rights work, drawing on medical, psychological and legal expertise within a single, structured approach that supports victims and helps them reach justice.

The agenda includes sessions introducing the Protocol, the international legal rules linked to it, and medical and psychological examination methods, alongside discussion of Bahrain's experience in applying the Protocol and ways to develop that work further.

Ministry limits role to ad content, not leaflet drops

Mohammed Darwish
TDT | Manama

The Industry and Commerce Ministry has told Shura Council member Dr Ali Al Haddad it is not responsible for regulating leaflets left on house doors or vehicles without owners' permission.

In a written reply signed by Minister, His Excellency Abdullah Fakhro, the ministry said this type of leaflet drop, including material placed on homes or cars, does not fall within its remit.

The response addressed Al Haddad's questions about what the ministry is doing to organise such distribution and how it might work with other bodies to curb the practice, promote compliance with rules, protect public cleanliness and avoid disturbing residents.

Content

The ministry said that while

it does not oversee the act of distributing these materials, it does oversee the content of commercial advertising through its consumer protection role.

Ban

It applies the Consumer Protection Law of 2012 and its executive regulations, which ban misleading advertising and set out penalties and corrective steps for violations across commercial adverts, whether published directly or shared through traditional or online channels.

It also referred to joint work with the Interior Ministry's anti-cybercrime unit, including awareness drives for consumers and traders on unlawful or misleading adverts.

Complaints

Consumer complaints about deceptive advertising, it said, are received and handled through the ministry's customer service channels.

For marketing offers, discounts and prize draws, the ministry said its Consumer Protection Directorate reviews documents before such promotions are published in shops or on social media, and issues licences after checking that requirements are met.

Businesses are required to display the licence certificate clearly at the front of the shop, with failure to do so treated as an administrative breach.

The ministry added that it provides several reporting routes, including the Consumer Protection Contact Centre on 17007003, and carries out periodic and seasonal inspections across commercial activities in all governorates of Bahrain.

It also advised consumers to check the validity of marketing campaign licences and the sources of adverts before making a purchase.

Councils and ministries team up to strengthen drainage systems before rainy season

● Pumps and drains checked across Muharraq, Northern Governorate

Mohammed Darwish
TDT | Manama

Councils in Muharraq and the Northern Governorate say they are working with the Ministry of Works and municipal bodies to prepare drainage networks, pumps and response teams ahead of the rainy season, drawing on lessons from past flooding in residential areas.

Abdulaziz Al Na’aar, chairman of the Muharraq Municipal Council, said planning involved extended talks with undersecretaries and a clear split of tasks between ministries.

“We met with the undersecretaries of all the ministries, and the discussions went on for about a month,” he said. “The Ministry of Works gave us its full plan, as did the Ministry of Municipalities Affairs.”

Work

He said the Ministry of Works handles main roads while the Ministry of Municipalities Affairs covers internal streets and passages, with stormwater drainage a core part of the work.

The councillor added that many areas already have channels and networks in place, while some newly developed blocks are still being completed.

Al Na’aar pointed to a long-running issue in the Fourth constituency in Muharraq, where a blocked pipe that once carried rainwater to the sea led to repeated overflow into neighbourhoods.

“We had a big problem that lasted four years,” he said, adding that the cause was not identified for a long stretch. “Because of the blockage, rainwater would overflow into the neighbourhoods.”

Fault

He said engineers from the Ministry of Works, including Eisa Al Malloud, explained the fault and proposed a system of pumps linked to large tanks feeding a final tank that discharges to the sea.

Two pumps were installed, but he said last year’s flooding showed the need for close oversight of day-to-day operation.

“It turned out that the worker there was operating only one pump, not both,” he said. “I contacted the engineer to address the matter.”

He also described an on-site traffic problem near the pumping area, where rubber pipes

“The council and relevant bodies have put in place an emergency plan for the season.”

— ZAINAB AL DURAZI, MUHARRAQ MUNICIPAL COUNCIL CHAIRMAN

municipal councillor Zainab Al Durazi, representative of the Twelfth constituency and chair of the Services and Public Utilities Committee at the Northern Municipal Council, said preparations are being tracked through a unified plan with the Northern Municipality, the Ministry of Works and other service bodies.

She said a series of coordination meetings reviewed rainwater pooling sites across northern areas, set priorities and agreed a rapid response plan covering team readiness, equipment, suction tankers and pumps.

The councillor added that Ministry of Works teams have started expanded cleaning campaigns for stormwater networks and maintenance at critical points that saw pooling in previous years, alongside checks of drains in key locations.

Emergency

Al Durazi said the council and relevant bodies have put in place an emergency plan for the season, including dedicated numbers for public reports that will be published by service bodies.

She said the Twelfth constituency is receiving close follow-up due to the need to strengthen parts of its drainage network and improve flow at specific points before the season begins in full.

Veggie ‘burgers’ at stake in EU negotiations

AFP | Brussels, Belgium

EU countries and lawmakers will wrangle Wednesday over whether to give plant-based “sausages” and veggie “burgers” the chop, amid a push to restrict such labels to meat products.

Many of Europe’s livestock farmers see plant-based foods that mimic meat products as potentially misleading for consumers, and a threat to their already troubled sector.

Lawmakers at the European Parliament in October backed a proposal to reserve a list of labels including burger and sausage for foods containing meat.

The EU’s 27 member states will now look to hash out the initiative with negotiators from the parliament as part of a broad-ranging package of new measures to protect farmers. Some countries seem reticent -- and officials say it may need more rounds of negotiations to reach an agreement.

Food retailers in Germany, Europe’s largest market for plant-based alternative products, have spoken out against the move, along with environmentalists and consumer advocates.

Among the high-profile opponents is also former Beatle and famed vegetarian Paul McCartney, who co-signed a letter to the EU’s executive arguing against the measure.

“We urge you not to adopt these restrictions, as we are deeply concerned about the significant global impact they could have,” the letter said.

But livestock farmers argue the opposite, with French industry group Interbev saying it “confuses consumers and undermines recognition” in meat products.

EU consumption of plant-based alternatives to meat products has grown five-fold since 2011, according to data from BEUC, a consumer group.

Plant-based burgers can mimic the sight, smell, and sizzle of real meat because they use ingredients like hemp, pea protein, beetroot juice, and coconut oil to recreate the colour, texture, and juiciness of beef – some brands even use legume-based heme molecules to produce a meat-like flavour when cooked.

US Fed expected to make third straight rate cut despite divisions

Washington, United States

The US Federal Reserve is expected to deliver a further interest rate cut despite divisions among its ranks, with chief Jerome Powell’s ability to secure support from fellow policymakers put to the test.

Financial markets expect a third consecutive 25 basis points reduction, bringing levels to a range between 3.50 percent and 3.75 percent. This would be the lowest in around three years.

But fissures within the Fed have grown even as policymakers slashed rates twice in recent months to boost the weakening employment market -- and the central bank faces a turbulent year ahead.

Officials opened their second day of deliberations at 9:00 am (1400 GMT), with their decision to be unveiled later Wednesday.

“We look for at least two dissents in favor of no action and one in favor of a larger cut,” said Michael Feroli, chief US economist at JP Morgan.

“There are almost equally compelling reasons to cut and to hold,” he added in a recent note.

News in brief

◆ Cyprus has launched a national search-and-rescue operation after a yacht that departed Israel over a week ago went missing in stormy waters off the Mediterranean island, authorities said yesterday. The Joint Rescue Coordination Centre (JRCC) said it triggered the search on Tuesday to locate the vessel, which set sail on December 2 bound for the Greek island of Crete. The yacht's last known position was recorded on December 8 inside the Cyprus Search and Rescue Region (SRR), about 89 nautical miles (165 kilometres) from the southwestern coastal town of Paphos, the JRCC said in a statement. "Vessels in the area have been tasked to assist in locating the missing sailboat," it said, adding that government air assets would join the operation Wednesday.

South Korea, Japan protest over China, Russia aircraft incursions

◆ South Korea and Japan reacted furiously yesterday after Chinese and Russian military aircraft conducted joint patrols around the two countries, with both Seoul and Tokyo scrambling jets. South Korea said it had lodged a protest with representatives of China and Russia, while Japan said it had conveyed its "serious concerns" over national security. According to Tokyo, two Russian Tu-95 nuclear-capable bombers on Tuesday flew from the Sea of Japan to rendezvous with two Chinese H-6 bombers in the East China Sea, then conducted a joint flight around the country.

◆ The US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is conducting a broad investigation into deaths potentially linked to Covid-19 vaccines, a spokesperson for Donald Trump's vaccine-skeptic health secretary said Tuesday. Since Trump's appointment of Robert F. Kennedy Jr. as health secretary, the US government has initiated a major overhaul of vaccine policy, prompting growing concerns among the medical community. "FDA is doing a thorough investigation, across multiple age groups, of deaths potentially related to COVID vaccines," a spokesperson for Kennedy's health and human services department, Andrew Nixon, told AFP. Bloomberg and the Washington Post had previously reported on the probe. The review, which was initially intended to focus on possible child deaths, has sparked controversy in recent weeks following the leak of an internal document in late November. Attributed to a senior FDA official, the memo claimed Covid vaccines are linked to at least 10 infant deaths, without providing any evidence. The efficacy and safety of Covid vaccines have been studied and documented worldwide, as have rare cases of severe side effects that do not undermine the vaccine's benefits for most age groups, according to various health authorities around the world.

Nearly 200 children conceived from sperm donor with increased cancer risk

AFP | Copenhagen, Denmark

A sperm donor, who is an asymptomatic carrier of a genetic mutation increasing the risk of cancer, was used to conceive nearly 200 children worldwide, Denmark's public broadcaster revealed yesterday.

Between 2006 and 2022, the man's sperm was sold to 67 clinics in 14 countries. In Denmark alone, 99 children were fathered by the donor.

"At least 197 children were born thanks to the sperm of an anonymous Danish donor using the alias Kjeld before the sperm bank discovered a serious genetic abnormality," public broadcaster DR reported.

According to DR, Denmark's European Sperm Bank, one of the largest in the world, was alerted in April 2020 that a child conceived via donation and diagnosed with cancer carried a genetic mutation.

It then tested a sample of the donor's sperm, but the screening did not detect the rare TP53 mutation.

Sales of the sperm, which had been suspended during testing, then resumed.

Three years later, the sperm bank was informed of at least one other child conceived from a donation with the mutation that had developed cancer.

It then tested several samples, which showed that the donor carried the gene, though he was healthy. The use of his sperm was then blocked in late October 2023.

Many European countries have regulations limiting the number of children per donor, but there are no international regulations governing the number of children a donor can father across borders. At the end of 2022, the European Sperm Bank set a maximum of 75 families per donor.

Not lovin' it: McDonald's pulls Dutch AI Christmas ad

AI ad sparked a (Mc)flurry of criticism on social media

● Sweetshop Films, which made the ad, defended its use of artificial intelligence in a post on LinkedIn

AFP | The Hague, Netherlands

U S burger chain McDonald's said yesterday it had removed an AI-generated Christmas advert in the Netherlands after it was filleted online.

The advert, "the most terrible time of the year", depicts Christmas chaos, with Santa caught in a traffic jam and a present-laden Dutch cyclist slipping in the snow.

The message: retreat to a McDonald's restaurant until January and ride out the festive season. But the generative AI ad sparked a (Mc)flurry of criticism on social media.

The message: retreat to a McDonald's restaurant until January and ride out the festive season.

"This commercial single-handedly ruined my Christmas spirit," said one user. "Good riddance to AI slop," posted another.

McDonald's Netherlands said in a statement to AFP: "The Christmas commercial was intended to show the stressful moments during the holidays in the Netherlands.

"However, we notice -- based on the social comments and international media coverage -- that for many guests this period is 'the most wonderful time of the year'."

Melanie Bridge, chief executive of The Sweetshop Films, which made the ad, defended its use of artificial intelligence in a post on LinkedIn.

"It's never about replacing craft, it's about expanding the toolbox. What the vision, the taste, the leadership... that will always be human," she said.

"And here's the part people don't see: the hours that went into this job far exceeded a traditional shoot. Ten people, five weeks, full-time," added Bridge.

But this too sparked online debate.

Emlyn Davies, from independent production company Bomper Studio, replied to the LinkedIn post: "What about the humans who would have been in it, the actors, the choir?"

"Ten people on a project like this is a tiny amount compared to shooting it traditionally live action."

Earliest evidence of humans making fire found in UK

AFP | Paris, France

Excited scientists announced yesterday they have discovered evidence in the UK of humans deliberately making fire 400,000 years ago, dramatically pushing back the timeline for when our ancient relatives are known to have mastered this crucial skill.

Learning to light our own fires was one of the great turning points in human history, offering our ancestors warmth, a place to socialise and a way to cook food -- which helped us evolve our unusually big brains.

There are signs that humans were using fire more than a million years ago in Africa, but it is believed these flames were originally lit by natural causes such as lightning.

Finding solid evidence that our ancestors were sparking their own fires has proven extremely difficult, possibly because the tools did not last throughout the millennia.

Picture for representation only

That is why a team led by researchers from the British Museum were so pleased to find a human fireplace dating back 400,000 years near the village of Barnham, in Suffolk, eastern England.

Previously, the oldest evidence of fire-making anywhere in the world was found in France -- and dated back 50,000 years.

"This is the most exciting discovery of my 40-year career," Nick Ashton, a curator at the British Museum and senior author of a study in Nature describing the find, told a press conference.

Interestingly, the researchers believe the fireplace belonged to perhaps the most-maligned member of the human family tree: the Neanderthal.

The Barnham archaeological site was first identified in the late 1800s, when ancient elephant tools were found there.

The first hint that the site could be home to a fireplace came in 2021, when scientists came across sediment that showed signs of being repeatedly heated.

But it took four years of painstaking work to prove that the heated clay was not caused by wildfire.

"The big turning point came with the discovery of iron pyrite," Ashton said.

This mineral is used to create the spark to light tinder. It is also very rare in the area, indicating that ancient humans brought it to the site, the researchers said.

They also found fire-cracked handaxes that could have struck the pyrite.

Instagram users given new algorithm controls

AFP | San Francisco, United States

Instagram yesterday unveiled a new AI-powered feature that lets users view and adjust the algorithm shaping their Reels feed, calling it a pioneering move toward greater user control.

The Meta-owned app is introducing "Your Algorithm," accessible through an icon in the upper right corner of Reels -- a user's video feed -- which displays the topics Instagram believes users are interested in based on their viewing history.

In a blog post, Meta said users can now directly tell the platform which subjects they want to see more or less of, with recommendations adjusting accordingly in real time.

Social media platforms have faced mounting pressure from regulators and users alike to provide greater transparency around algorithmic content curation, which critics say can create echo chambers or promote harmful content.

But companies also see algorithms as their platform's 'secret sauce' for engaging users and have often resisted greater transparency.

"Instagram has always been a place to dive deep into your interests and connect with friends," the company said in its blog. "As your interests evolve over time, we want to give you more meaningful ways to control what you see."

The feature shows users a summary of their top interests and allows them to type in specific topics to fine-tune their feed.

Instagram said it is "leading the way" in offering such transparency and control, with plans to expand the feature beyond Reels to Explore and other sections of the app.

The tool launched Wednesday in the United States and will roll out globally in English "soon," the company said.

Gone in 30 seconds!

Louvre thieves escaped with 30 seconds to spare

Only one of two security cameras was working near the site

Police were initially sent to the wrong place

Robbers left only 30 seconds before police and private security guards arrived

AFP | Paris, France

The thieves who stole priceless crown jewels from the Louvre in October escaped with just 30 seconds to spare due to avoidable security failures at the Paris museum, a damning investigation revealed yesterday.

The probe, ordered by the culture ministry after the embarrassing daylight heist, revealed that only one of two security cameras was working near the site where the thieves broke in on the morning of Sunday October 19.

Agents in the security headquarters also did not have enough screens to follow the images in real-time, while a lack of coordination meant police were initially sent to the wrong place once the alarm

Visitors, seen from the Sully wing, queuing in the Cour Napoleon by the pyramid designed by Chinese-US architect Ieoh Ming Pei, to enter the Louvre Museum in Paris was raised, the report unveiled at the French Senate's Culture Commission, stated.

"It highlights an overall failure of the museum, as well as its supervisory authority, to address security issues," the head of the commission, Laurent Lafon, said at the start of a hearing.

One of the most startling revelations was that the robbers left only 30 seconds before police and private security guards arrived on the scene.

"Give or take 30 seconds, the Securitas (private security) guards or the police officers in a car could have prevented the thieves from escaping," the head of the investigation, Noel Corbin, told senators.

He said that measures such as a modern security camera system, more resistant glass in the door cut open with angle grinders, or better internal coordination could have prevented the loss of the crown jewels -- worth an estimated $102 million -- which have still not been found.

Security risks were highlighted in several reports commissioned by management of the Louvre, including a 2019 audit by the jewellery company Van Cleef & Arpels.

The evaluation said the balcony used by the thieves was a weak point in security and could be reached by using an extendable ladder -- exactly what transpired in the heist.

Joy in Egypt after beloved spicy staple koshary makes UNESCO list

AFP | Cairo, Egypt

UNESCO recognised yesterday Egypt's favourite daily dish as intangible cultural heritage, to the delight of Egyptians digging into the spicy staple at every corner.

"We grew up eating koshary in plastic bags. It's a heritage we grew up with," Emad Yassin told AFP during the lunch rush of a popular downtown Cairo joint, Koshary Abou Tarek.

The budget-friendly, carb-loaded bowl of noodles, rice, lentils and fried onions doused in a blazing hot sauce is a culinary staple in the Arab world's most populous country.

Irina, a Spanish tourist who had stopped in for a bite, said the UNESCO nod was a good call.

"It's a really good decision because when you're eating koshary, you can feel and taste the country here, all the mixes of flavours," she said.

Behind her and in corner shops across the country, mountains of noodles, rice and lentils are piled high in adjoining pots. With choreographed precision, vendors ladle scoop, after scoop, after scoop at lightning speed.

They pour tomato sauce all over, sprinkle fried onions, then leave it to each customer to season to taste: blazing hot sauce, tangy garlic-vinegar drizzle.

The humble meal has been passed down in many forms -- varying by region -- for centuries. It was first recorded, by British writer Richard Burton in 1866, as a winter breakfast in the eastern city of Suez.

At that point only lentils and rice, it wasn't until the mid-20th century that noodles were added to even further "cut costs after the price of rice skyrocketed", food archaeologist and archaeobotanist Mennat-Allah El Dorry told AFP.

YOU KNOW WHAT

Koshary became Egypt's national comfort food by accident -- it's a blend of Italian pasta, Indian rice and lentils, and Levantine fried onions, all mixed together by street vendors in the late 1800s. The British Army in Egypt also contributed to its popularity, as soldiers often mixed leftover ingredients into one bowl for a quick meal.

'Shopaholic' author Sophie Kinsella dies aged 55

AFP | London, United Kingdom

British author Sophie Kinsella, who penned the popular "Shopaholic" series, has died aged 55 after being diagnosed with brain cancer, her family announced yesterday.

Madeleine Sophie Wickham, who wrote under the pen name Sophie Kinsella, revealed last year that she was receiving chemotherapy and radiotherapy for glioblastoma, an aggressive form of brain cancer.

"We are heartbroken to announce the passing this morning of our beloved Sophie," her family said on Instagram.

"Sophie counted herself truly blessed -- to have such wonderful family and friends, and to have had the extraordinary success of her writing career," her family said.

She published over 30 books which have sold some 50 million copies and have been translated into over 40 languages, according to a biography on her website.

Her lighthearted writing style won fans for its humour and relatability, giving an insight into the romances, careers and financial concerns of young women.

Kinsella preferred the terms "romantic comedy" or "wit lit" over "chick lit" to describe her work.

The first two books from her "Shopaholic" series were adapted for the 2009 romantic comedy film "Confessions of a Shopaholic" starring Isla Fisher.

Writer Sophie Kinsella

They tell the stories of Becky Bloomwood, a financial journalist who is a serial shopper and hopeless when it comes to her own finances.

"I was really excited, it felt like a new voice," Kinsella said of penning the series in 2000.

"I thought it was my side project. But having discovered comedy, it's addictive," she told The Times newspaper in 2024.

Daughter of Venezuela's Machado picks up Nobel peace prize in her absence

Ana Corina Sosa (R), daughter of Venezuelan opposition leader Maria Corina Machado, receives the Nobel Peace Prize for her mother from the Chair of the Norwegian Nobel Committee Jorgen Watne Frydnes (L) at the Nobel Peace Prize ceremony at Oslo City Hall in Oslo, Norway.

AFP | Oslo, Norway

Venezuela's opposition leader Maria Corina Machado yesterday urged her compatriots to fight for freedom against "state terrorism", as she said she was coming out of hiding to travel to Norway after being awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in her absence.

Machado, who won the Nobel for challenging President Nicolas Maduro's grip on power, has not been seen in public for months after threats to her life.

Her daughter accepted the prize on her behalf in the Norwegian capital, Oslo, and delivered her blistering acceptance speech, slamming the country's leader for crimes against the Venezuelan people.

"What we Venezuelans can offer the world is the lesson forged through this long and difficult journey: that to have democracy, we must be willing to fight for freedom," said Ana Corina Sosa Machado.

In a call with the chair of the Nobel Committee, Jorgen Watne Frydnes, published just before the ceremony, Machado said she was "very sad and very sorry" that she would not make it in time but was on her way to Oslo.

Frydnes, for his part, urged Maduro to accept his 2024 election defeat and resign.

"Lay the foundation for a peaceful transition to democracy. Because that is the will of the Venezuelan people," he added in a speech, to applause.

Not just pizza: Italian cuisine makes UNESCO list

Italy proposed the much wider “cucina italiana” in 2023

● First time the entire scope of a nation's cuisine has made the cut

● Culinary rival France in 2010 won UNESCO recognition for “the gastronomic meal of the French”.

AFP | Rome, Italy

UNESCO recognised yesterday that Italian food is more than pizza, pasta and gelato, adding the range

The world's first pizzeria, called Antica Pizzeria Port'Alba, opened in Naples in 1830, and it's still operating today – serving pizzas from an oven lined with volcanic rocks from Mount Vesuvius.

An Italian “Pizzaiolo” (pizza maker) prepares a Pizza Margherita in the first stone oven where was cooked a Pizza Margherita at the Capodimonte museum in Naples.

and ritual of the famed cuisine to its list of intangible cultural heritage.

Prime Minister Giorgia Meloni, whose hard-right government has championed “Made in Italy” products as part of her nationalist agenda, hailed the recognition that she said “honours who we are and our identity”.

“Because for us Italians, cuisine is not just food or a collection of recipes. It is much more:

it is culture, tradition, work, wealth,” she said in a statement.

Pizza-making in Naples already features on the UN cultural agency's list of intangible heritage, as does espresso coffee.

Meloni's government proposed the much wider “cucina italiana” in 2023.

The government said it was the first time the entire scope of a nation's cuisine has made the cut.

Culinary rival France in 2010 won UNESCO recognition for “the gastronomic meal of the French”. That more celebratory affair, which begins with an aperitif and ends with liqueurs, includes four courses.

In Rome's Trastevere neighbourhood on Tuesday, the co-owner of the small “Da Gillo” trattoria, Leonora Saltalippi, said Italy's cuisine had centuries of mothers and grandmothers to thank.

“It is all a heritage born from the vision of women in the kitchen,” the 43-year-old restaurateur told AFP.

They “have cooked for centuries and found, in the small things from the land and the poverty of the ages, a flavour that starts with oil and ends up in everything they touch,” she said.

Pouring a delicate stream of olive oil over a plate of fettuccini with artichokes, she noted that across the country, every family had their own recipe, “with nothing written down”.

Customer Tiziana Acanfora, 51, added: “What certainly makes the difference is the care and love with which things in general are prepared, not just the kitchen.”

At a table nearby, US tourist Naomi King polished off an oxtail stew “that I would recommend a hundred times over”.

“Italian food is one of the better foods in terms of flavour in the world,” she told AFP, highlighting the huge variety she and her husband had eaten since arriving in Italy.

The focus on local fruits and vegetables also made the difference, she added: “They know how to take that and make it into something special.”

Amazon says will invest $35bn in India by 2030

AFP | Mumbai, India

E-commerce giant Amazon said Wednesday it would nearly double its investment in India, seeking to expand exports, create jobs and invest in artificial intelligence in the world's most populous nation.

Several global corporations, including technology giant Microsoft, have announced large investments this year in the South Asian nation, the world's fifth-largest economy, and which is projected to have more than 900 million internet users by year's end.

“Amazon has announced plans to invest more than $35 billion across all its businesses in India through 2030, building on nearly $40 billion invested in the country so far,” the US online giant said in a statement.

“This investment will focus on business expansion as well as three strategic pillars: AI-driven digitisation, export growth, and job creation.”

The announcement comes a day after Microsoft said it will invest $17.5 billion to help build India's artificial intelligence infrastructure, with CEO Satya Nadella calling it “our largest investment ever in Asia”.

Amazon said it had invested in both building physical and digital infrastructure, including transportation networks, data centres, digital payments infrastructure and technology development.

“The investment will create one million jobs, boost cumulative exports to $80 billion, and deliver AI benefits to 15 million small businesses”, the e-commerce company statement added, in an announcement made in New Delhi.

Amazon said it will build on existing investments that have “digitised 12 million small businesses and enabled $20 billion in exports”, it added.

“We're excited to continue being a catalyst for India's growth,” top Amazon official Amit Agarwal said.

As of 2024, Amazon's India operations have digitally enabled over 12 million small businesses, and supported roughly 2.8 million direct, indirect, induced or seasonal jobs across technology, logistics, packaging, and services

Indian festival of lights Diwali joins UNESCO heritage list

AFP | New Delhi, India

India's festival of lights, Diwali, was yesterday announced as an addition to UNESCO's intangible cultural heritage list, sparking celebrations.

The United Nations cultural agency, meeting in the Indian capital New Delhi from Tuesday to Thursday, is examining dozens of nominations from as many as 78 countries.

The new announcements will join UNESCO's list of cultural heritage, whose purpose is to “raise awareness of the diversity of these traditions” and protect them in future.

Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi welcomed the announcement, saying the festival was “very closely linked to our culture and ethos”.

“It is the soul of our civilisation. It personifies illumination and righteousness,” he said in a statement on social media, adding the move “will contribute to the festival's global popularity even further”.

The Delhi government is organising several events, including special illumination of buildings and decoration across major roads, along with a massive lamp-lighting ceremony.

As one of Hinduism's most significant festivals, millions of Indians celebrate Diwali, also Local residents watch fireworks light up the sky as part of Diwali celebrations, the Hindu festival of lights, in Mumbai known as Deepavali, not just in India but globally.

Many people, including those from the Sikh and Jain religious communities, observe it as a five-day festival which symbolises the triumph of good over evil.

Celebrations, which happen on the new moon day in either late October or November, usually see lighting of lamps and bursting of firecrackers.

In much of north India, Diwali marks the return of Hindu Lord Rama to Ayodhya after defeating the demon king Ravana.

The festival is also strongly associated with worship of Lakshmi, the goddess of wealth and prosperity.

India's foreign ministry said Diwali's addition to the UNESCO list was a “joyous moment” for the country.

During Diwali, people in many parts of India use mustard oil lamps because mustard oil is believed to purify the air and drive away negative energy – a tradition that dates back thousands of years to early agrarian communities.

Liverpool edge Inter in Champions League as Chelsea lose in Italy

Late penalty gives Liverpool a crucial win in Milan without Mohamed Salah

● Dominik Szoboszlai scores late penalty for Liverpool in 1-0 win

● Chelsea lose 2-1 to Atalanta

● Barcelona beat Frankfurt with Kounde brace

Liverpool snatched a 1-0 win away to Inter Milan in the Champions League on Tuesday without unsettled star Mohamed Salah, while Chelsea slipped to defeat against Atalanta and Barcelona overcame Eintracht Frankfurt.

Dominik Szoboszlai scored a late penalty as Liverpool snapped Inter's 18-game unbeaten home run in Europe despite the absence of Salah, who was left out of the squad after his extraordinary public criticism of manager Arne Slot.

Szoboszlai drilled his spot-kick past Yann Sommer two minutes from time at the San Siro after Alessandro Bastoni was punished for tugging the shirt of substitute Florian Wirtz, clinching a much-needed win for the troubled Premier League champions.

“Huge result. We knew we were coming to a tough place, to a team that’s in a good moment. We had to show fight and dig in,” Liverpool defender Andy Robertson told Amazon Prime.

A fourth victory in six Champions League games bumped Liverpool up into the top eight to keep them in the hunt for direct qualification to the last 16 as they contend with the fallout of Salah’s weekend outburst.

The Egyptian forward said he felt like he had been “thrown under the bus” by Liverpool during the club’s dip in form and no longer had a relationship with Slot.

“A tough situation. We’re talking about one of the greatest players to play for this club,” said Robertson. “Whatever has happened, happened. Internally, we’re all together.”

Gianluca Scamacca headed Atalanta level after half-time and Charles De Ketelaere, who set up the equaliser, smashed in the winner for the Bergamo-based side on 83 minutes.

“In the Champions League, if you concede one goal, and then another (soon), it is difficult to come back.”

Atalanta are third with 13 points, two adrift of leaders Arsenal and Bayern Munich, while Chelsea dropped down to 11th place.

Bayern rally as Spurs cruise

Bayern came from behind to beat Sporting Lisbon 3-1 as they bounced back from a loss to Arsenal last month.

Hosts Bayern fell behind to a Joshua Kimmich own-goal in the second half but Serge Gnabry and 17-year-old Lennart Karl led the fightback.

Jules Kounde emerged as the unlikely hero for Barcelona as the France defender scored a pair of headers in a 2-1 win over Eintracht Frankfurt.

Ansgar Knauff sent the visitors into a surprise lead but Kounde’s brace early in the second half swung the game in favour of Barcelona in their first Champions League match at Camp Nou since 2022.

Arne Slot dedicated Tuesday’s 1-0 Champions League win at Inter Milan to the players he took to Italy, refusing to further fuel a public row with star forward Mohamed Salah.

“We came back in the end, got the three points and we’re happy.”

Tottenham eased to a 3-0 home win against Slavia Prague courtesy of penalties from Mohammed Kudus and Xavi Simons after David Zima’s 26th-minute own-goal in north London.

Spurs climbed up to ninth and sit just a point behind Liverpool.

Mason Greenwood struck twice as Marseille held on to beat Union Saint-Gilloise 3-2 in Brussels, while Folarin Balogun scored the only goal as Monaco edged Galatasaray 1-0.

Atletico Madrid won 3-2 at PSV Eindhoven with goals from Julian Alvarez, David Hancko and Alexander Sorloth.

“In the rich history Liverpool have they’ve had many of these evenings,” Slot told reporters.

“But in the season we are in, I think if you were having an away win in this stadium against such a strong team then it should be about the ones that are here, they deserve all the credits.”

Orlando to face New York in NBA Cup semis at Vegas

AFP | London

The Orlando Magic, sparked by 37 points from Desmond Bane, and the New York Knicks advanced to an NBA Cup semi-final showdown with breakthrough triumphs on Tuesday.

Bane went 6-of-9 from three-point range and added six rebounds and five assists in Orlando’s 117-108 victory over visiting Miami.

Jalen Suggs added 20 points for the Magic, who despite lacking top scorer Franz Wagner

due to a high ankle sprain won for the 11th time in 15 games and improved to 5-0 in Cup play.

“We need these reps. We need to play in these meaningful games,” Bane said. “We’re a young team trying to make something happen like a run so we need these moments.”

New York’s Jalen Brunson scored 35 points, 20 of them in the first quarter, to power the Knicks over host Toronto 117-101 in Tuesday’s other quarter-final.

Josh Hart added 21 points for the Knicks while Karl-Anthony Towns had 14 points and 16 rebounds as New York won for the eighth time in nine games.

“We knew it was going to be a tough one,” Hart said. “We had to be ready. Defensively the second quarter was amazing. We only gave up 13 points and that’s where we were really able to build our lead and put the game away.

“It’s about winning every game, winning every possession. If you do that, you’ll get to the end goal.”

The FIFA Arab Cup 2025 enters its knockout phase this evening, with Morocco facing Syria before Palestine meet Saudi Arabia in a heavy-weight clash at the iconic Lusail Stadium. After an intense group stage, all four sides now stand just one win away from the semi finals.

At Khalifa International Stadium, the Atlas Lions take on Syria at 5:30 PM. Morocco arrive unbeaten and confident, yet fully aware that knockout football allows no missteps. Forward Walid Azaro spoke about the squad’s mindset heading into the tie, stressing their desire to prolong their journey in what he described as a “beautiful tournament”. “It is a competition with outstanding stadiums and fantastic fans,” he said. “Our mind-set is to take each match as it comes. We cannot think ahead. The key now is to focus fully on the Syria match.”

Syria qualified from Group A after grinding out a 0-0 draw with Palestine, an emotional moment that saw both sets of players celebrate together as they advanced side by side. Well organized and hard to break down, the Qasioun Eagles will aim to frustrate Morocco and strike in transition.

Later in the night, the action

Morocco players celebrate securing their place in the last eight shifts to Lusail Stadium, host of the 2022 World Cup final, where Palestine meet Saudi Arabia at 8:30 PM. Palestine topped Group A with five points, highlighted by a 1-0 win over hosts Qatar and spirited draws against Tunisia and Syria. Their resilience and togetherness have been defining features of their campaign.

Meanwhile, Saudi Arabia finished second in Group B with six points, powered by victories over Oman and Comoros before narrowly falling to Morocco. The Green Falcons hold the historical edge in the head to head with five wins and four draws in nine meetings, including a 5-0 win in 2021 World Cup qualifying.

Both teams know the stakes. Victory tonight brings a ticket to the semi finals on December 15. Tomorrow, the quarter finals continue with Iraq against Jordan and Algeria against UAE as the road to the final on December 18 tightens further.

Defending Champions Tumble in Opening Round of Bahrain ITF Junior Circuit

TDT | Manama

The International Tennis Federation (ITF) Junior Circuit J60 tournament in Bahrain saw dramatic upsets in its opening round, with the champions from the previous week’s edition suffering early exits in both the boys’ and girls’ singles draws. The tournament, hosted by the Bahrain Tennis Federation, has now finalised its qualifiers for the round of 16.

In the boys’ singles, defending champion Malik Al-Qurna of Jordan was eliminated after a decisive straight-sets loss to Daniil Kvasov of Uzbekistan, falling 6-3, 6-0. The girls’ singles witnessed a similar shock as the Dutch defending champion was defeated by Turkey’s Melis Yildirim with a score of 6-1, 6-4. These early exits have completely opened up the third week of the circuit.

Meanwhile, top seed Arnav Paparkar of India advanced smoothly, overcoming Uzbekistan’s Abdulrahman Karimov 6-3, 6-4. Other seeded players also progressed, including Japanese seventh seed Daisuke Hashimoto, who defeated Javier Montes Jimenez of Spain.

However, local Bahraini hope Ahmed Al-Sayed exited in the first round after losing to Turkey’s Doruk Çalkoğlu 6-3, 6-4. The day concluded with the second seed in the boys’ draw, Omar Kandeel of Egypt, securing a straightforward 6-0, 6-1 victory over Australia’s Nicholas Scott.

Evenepoel to share Red Bull lead with Lipowitz at Tour de France

AFP | London

Remco Evenepoel will share the leadership role with Florian Lipowitz at the 2026 Tour de France in 2026, he said at Red Bull Bora’s training camp in Mallorca yesterday.

Double Olympic and multiple world champion Evenepoel has joined Lipowitz at Red Bull after a move from Belgian outfit Quick Step.

Remco Evenepoel

“This will be the first time I share leadership in the Tour de France. That’s a good thing, it’s always better to have several options.

“We are both aiming for the ultimate goal: victory,” said the soon to be 26-year-old sporting a new goatee beard.

Evenepoel came third at the Tour de France in 2024, but had to abandon this year on the slopes of the Tourmalet during the 14th stage.

He then went to Rwanda and won the world time trial title in sensational style.

But at the Tour, Lipowitz took third in what was a breakout season for him.

Sabalenka says transgender women in WTA events ‘not fair’

AFP | Paris

World No. 1 Aryna Sabalenka said Tuesday that she considers it “not fair” that the women’s professional tennis tour allows transgender women to compete in WTA tournaments, even though they are currently absent from the elite of world tennis.

Appearing on British host Piers Morgan’s show on Tuesday evening, the Belarusian was asked if she shared the opinion of former world No. 1 Martina Navratilova, who opposes transgender women participating in WTA tournaments.

“That’s a tricky question,” said Sabalenka.

“I have nothing against them but I feel like they have still got a huge advantage over women (who have not undergone gender transition).

“And I think it’s just not fair to a woman to face, biologically men. It’s not fair,” added Sabalenka, who will take on Nick Kyrgios in an exhibition match dubbed ‘The Battle of the Sexes’ in Dubai at the end of December.

“Like the woman has been working her whole life to reach her limit and then she has to face like a man, who is biologically much stronger. So I don’t agree with this kind of stuff in sport,” she added.

The participation of transgender women in WTA tournaments is permitted under certain conditions, one of which is that their blood testosterone concentration has remained below 2.5 nanomoles per litre for the past two years.

They must also submit to the WTA a signed declaration attesting to their female or non-binary gender identity.

In practice, no transgender woman is currently playing a leading role on the WTA tour.
