The upcoming visit of ‘Vic-ar of Christ’ to the King-dom is in line with the Vatican’s and Pope Francis’ aim to seek a ‘war-free Middle East’, Union of Catholic Asian News reported.

“The Supreme Pontiff was supposed to visit Bahrain as early as 2014 after the first meeting at the Vatican between Pope Francis and King Hamad.

“But the United Arab Emirates visit came first. The Pope signed the Declaration for Human Fraternity for World Peace and Living Together along with Shaikh Ahmed Al Tayeb in Abu Dhabi on Feb 4, 2019. His Majesty King Hamad has endorsed the Document on Human Fraternity as a major milestone to foster religious harmony,” the report said.

The report also praises the Kingdom for “being the greatest nation of tolerance in the whole region and world”.

Pope Francis will travel to the Kingdom for a three-day visit in November – an occasion that is expected to attract tens of thousands of Catholics and other followers.

The pontiff, 85, will visit the Arabian Gulf’s largest Roman Catholic Church in Awali.

This will be the second visit by the head of the church to the Arabian Gulf after Pope Francis’s historic visit to the UAE in 2019.

the patronage of His Majesty the King, the Royal Court said.

The Royal Court looks forward to welcoming His Holiness the Pope to the Kingdom of Bahrain, acknowledging his sincere efforts to promote a culture of dialogue and peaceful coexistence, a statement issued said.

His Majesty King Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa met Pope Francis during His Majesty’s visit to the Vatican on May 19, 2014.

During the occasion, His Majesty also held talks with the Cardinal Secretary of State Pietro Parolin and the former Secretary for Relations with States, Archbishop Dominique Mamberti.

According to a Holy See Press Office statement at the time, cordial discussions between the Bahraini King and the Pope focused on various themes of common interest, “with particular reference to the commitment towards peace and stability in the Middle East, as well as the promotion of dialogue and peaceful co-existence among all members of society.”

Mention was also made of the Christian community’s positive contribution to the country, and “appreciation was expressed for His Majesty’s personal interest in the needs of the local Catholic community”.

Bahrain’s second global forum on oil spills and environmental preservation

Minister of Oil and Environment and Special Envoy for Climate Affairs Dr Mohammed bin Mubarak Bin Daina inaugurated the 2nd international Conference & Exhibition on Spills, Clean Seas & Environment under the theme Sustainable Clean Seas.

The conference includes more than 500 participants, 60 international speakers and 30 companies representing more than 20 countries.

It aims to discuss the most important topics related to oil spills, exchanging knowledge and experiences, and reviewing best practices in oil spills and environmental preservation.

Dr Bin Daina thanked the organising committee for the efforts made in organising this global event and for choosing Bahrain to hold the conference

He stressed the Kingdom’s keenness to provide support to such specialised conferences with a positive outcome on the environmental knowledge and development system, in addition to maintaining a clean environment free of pollutants.

The Minister noted the importance of the topics that the conference will address such as sustainable clean seas in terms of readiness, response and adaptation, crisis management, communications and media management, and the role and impact of leadership in managing oil spills.

He stressed the ministry’s keenness to organise these conferences, which are considered among the training programs offered to creative Bahrainis capable of finding innovative, proactive and flexible solutions to face various spill types.

Two women involved in child assault jailed

A woman accused of physically assaulting a child in a nursery for a period of three years has been sentenced to three years behind bars, while another woman involved in filming her while committing the crime received one-year jail term.

Both of the defendants were also fined BD100 for the charge of working in the nursery without license. They will be permanently deported from the country after the execution of the penalty.

The Public Prosecution had received a report from the Budaiya Police Station that a nursery worker had physically assaulted a girl there. It was discovered that the assault was filmed by another worker in the same nursery.

The video went viral across social media platforms and was met by wide denunciation in the Kingdom of Bahrain as many made their dismay felt on the Instagram account of the nursery.

The Public Prosecution began investigating the report and ordered the arrest of the workers for questioning. When confronted with the recorded clip they confessed to the charge and were detained.

Upon evidence that the nursery’s license had expired and that its employees are not authorised to work in the field, the Public Prosecution ordered the closure of the nursery and assigned the child victim’s case to the Child Protection Centre.

The accused were referred to the competent court, which issued the aforementioned ruling.

Meanwhile, the owner of the nursery was sentenced to two months for keeping the nursery open, although its license has expired, and he was fined BD1,000 for the crime.

Left lane closure set

23 face trial in BD75 million money laundering case

TDT | Manama

The High Criminal Court has begun hearing a money laundering case worth BD75 million which involves 23 defendants who obtained a BD500 million loan from one of the Gulf countries.

They conducted money laundering operations on the amount after defrauding the bank and evading installment payments.

Among the eight defendants are four British, a Turkish, an American, two Bahrainis, and an Asian, in addition to 15 companies which the suspects used to legalise the money.

The defendants were able to get a $500 million bank loan while they were in one of the Gulf countries.

They were successful in obtaining the loan after submitting papers and documents claiming their fields of business and investments. They made several transfers of money to various countries abroad and conducted suspicious commercial operations on the money to conceal the source of the funds and claim their authenticity.

According to investigations, they got the loan and transported $75 million to Bahrain under the guise of investment, through the acquisition of real estate and land, as well as the formation of multiple fictional firms.

The two Bahrainis, who are brothers, attempted to disguise the source of the money to help the other defendants.

Meanwhile, the court decided to postpone the next session until October 18, 2022 to allow the defendants’ lawyers to review the papers of the case and respond.
