AUB Students Win Arab Innovation Award for 'LYNQ'

Students from the American University of Bahrain (AUB), founders of the "LYNQ" project, won the "Innovative Project of the Year" award at the INJAZ Al-Arab Youth Entrepreneurship Competition in Egypt. LYNQ is a groundbreaking water cooler that converts air moisture into potable water—a sustainable response to plastic pollution in the Gulf. This regional win follows their local success in June, where they secured "Company of the Year" and "Excellence in Technology" awards from INJAZ Bahrain. Dr. Amal Al-Awadhi, Dean of Student Affairs, praised the students, noting this victory validates AUB's vision to empower youth and foster innovation that contributes added value to society and the economy. The team expressed gratitude to AUB and INJAZ for their support.
