Pedro Pascal to lead cast of 'Star Wars' series

AFP | Los Angeles

Pedro Pascal

"Narcos" and "Game of Thrones" star Pedro Pascal is to play the lead in upcoming "Star Wars" TV series "The Mandalorian," Disney said, as it builds on the beloved and profitable science fiction franchise. Penned and produced by Marvel mainstay Jon Favreau, the live-action show will follow Pascal's lone gunfighter, making his way in the outer reaches of the galaxy after the fall of the Empire. "We're having a great time working with this incredibly talented group and excited for everyone to see what we're up to," said Favreau, whose next big screen project will be Disney's "The Lion King (2019). Pascal, 43, made his name as the dashing prince Oberyn Martell in

"Game of Thrones," and cemented his stardom as drug cop Javier Pena in "Narcos." The Texas-raised Chilean-American has since broken into the Hollywood mainstream via "Kingsman: The Golden Circle," "The Equalizer 2," and awards season darling "If Beale Street Could Talk." Other actors announced for the series -- set to debut on Disney's upcoming small screen streaming service -- include Gina Carano ("Deadpool"), Giancarlo Esposito ("Breaking Bad"), Nick Nolte ("Hulk") and acclaimed German filmmaker Werner Herzog.

Let's get together: Kanye West to Bob Dylan

ANI | Washington

Seems like American rapper Kanye West wants to collaborate with guitarist Bob Dylan for his next album. Taking to his Twitter handle, the 'Ye' star reached out to the artist, where he tweeted, "Calling out to Bob Dylan Let's get together."

Unfortunately, Dylan does not have a Twitter. So it is unclear if he got the message. Kanye's straightforward reach to famous people has become a hallmark of his Twitter as earlier this year, he said he would like to meet Tim Cook, Apple's CEO, because he 'had some ideas.'
