Angelina feels Brad turned her life 'upside down'

ANI | Los Angeles

It's been over three years to their split, but Angelina Jolie still has some angst against ex-husband Brad Pitt.

Moreover, the 'Maleficent' actor believes that Pitt turned her and the kids' lives "upside down."

"Angelina still has a lot of resentment toward Brad. She wants him to be held accountable because she feels he turned her and the children's lives upside down," Us Weekly quoted a source as saying.

Once in the tinsel town, the two have been together for over a decade and finally walked down the aisle in August 2014. However, the two parted ways in September 2016.

Even more, Jolie's bitter feelings towards him are also due to the fact that she can't move out of Los Angeles, where she is based.

Earlier in the Harper's Bazaar December/January issue, the 44-year old actor has expressed that she would "love to live abroad," but "right now, I'm having to base where their father chooses to live."

"Before the divorce, the entire family led a very nomadic existence, and that was because of Angie's restlessness," another insider told the outlet.

The source added that the Pitt wanted the kids to have stability while according to Jolie, they were "giving the children an idyllic childhood by exposing them to different countries, languages and experiences."

In October this year, a source close to Jolie claimed that she didn't want to marry the 'Once Upon a Time in Hollywood' star in the first place.

"She felt that Brad pressured her," the source had said.

This is the reason that she will never get married again.

The former couple, however, has yet to finalise their divorce but they share physical and legal custody of their kids.

Charlize Theron, Adam McKay to be honoured at Costume Designers Guild

Hollywood Reporter | Los Angeles

Charlize Theron will accept another trophy this awards season, after taking home the American Cinematheque Award last week and one of Glamour's Women of the Year Awards on Monday. The Costume Designers Guild announced Wednesday that the Bombshell actress will receive the Spotlight Award at its 22nd annual ceremony, taking place Jan. 28 at the Beverly Hilton.

The Spotlight Award champions an actor who understands the importance of costuming for their character, with past recipients including Cate Blanchett, Amy Adams and Halle Berry.

Vice director Adam McKay (who this year produced Booksmart and Hustlers) will receive the Distinguished Collaborator Award, which honors supporters of costume designers onscreen. Quentin Tarantino, Ryan Murphy and Meryl Streep are past winners.

"Charlize Theron is a costume designer's dream, bringing integrity and style to every character she embodies, including her roles in Long Shot and Bombshell this year," says guild president Salvador Perez in a statement. "Adam McKay is a visionary and one of the best storytellers of our time regardless of cast, genre or platform, and the diversity of his body of work is astounding."

And finally, Mary Ellen Fields is accepting the Distinguished Service Award. The former owner of Bill Hargate Costumes, Fields and her team have created thousands of pieces for projects such as Black Panther and the Oscars telecasts. She has collaborated with costume designers Jeffrey Kurland (Dunkirk) and Ellen Mirojnick (The Greatest Showman).

Adds Perez, "Mary Ellen Fields is a much-loved member of the costume design community and is known for having magic fingers. So many of the pieces she has built over the years — from gowns to superhero costumes — are unspeakably beautiful."

Actor Dave Bautista is now guardian to 2 abandoned pit bulls

AP | Los Angeles

After sent out a desperate plea after someone had abandoned two pit bull dogs. But volunteers never expected the post would catch the attention of "Guardians of the Galaxy" actor Dave Bautista.

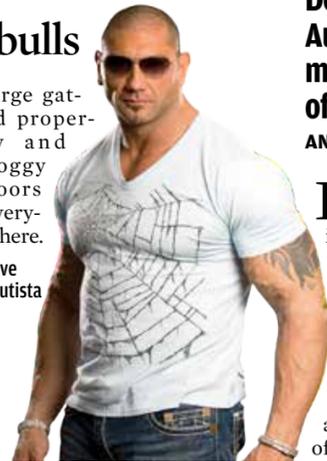

The 6-year-old pit bulls, Maggie and Ollie, were handed over to the county after their owner had a baby. Volunteers from Rescue Me Tampa wrote a post seeking someone who would take both dogs, writing they'd been together their whole life.

That was last month. A week later, the group posted a picture of the star hugging the two pups and announcing he had adopted them. The rescuers said Bautista is spoiling the rescue dogs with Tempur-Pedic dog beds, a large gated property and doggy doors everywhere.

Demi Lovato dating Austin Wilson; makes it Instagram official

ANI | Los Angeles

Demi Lovato has made a revelation that she is dating model Austin Wilson. She made the relationship Instagram official!

The 'Sorry Not Sorry' singer made it clear that she is now off the market as she posted a monochrome picture of her with Austin who is cutely planting a kiss on her cheek on Tuesday and captioned, "My" accompanied with a heart emoticon.

To confirm the same, the 25-year old model too shared the same click on his feed writing, "My love."

And in no time, the singer's friends dropped their congratulatory notes in the comment section.

Actor Debra Messing commented on the post, "Gorgeous."

However, their dating timeline is not confirmed yet. Meanwhile, Lovato was most recently linked to 'Bachelorette' alum Mike Johnson.

After exchanging some flirty messages on social media, their romance "fizzled out" after Johnson opened up about their private dates and disclosed that Lovato is a "really good kisser."

Despite female push, Garth Brooks bests Underwood at CMAs

AP | Los Angeles

The Country Music Association Awards almost fully honoured and highlighted the women of country music — whose songs have been heavily dismissed on country radio over the years — until two words were uttered when they named its entertainer of the year: Garth Brooks.

Wednesday night's show kicked off with a performance featuring country female acts across generations, included three female hosts and had Maren Morris as its top nominee. But in the final moments, Brooks won the top prize over Carrie Underwood, who many had hoped would be the first female to win entertainer of the year since 2011.

Brooks did highlight female acts during his acceptance speech at the Bridgestone Arena in Nashville, Tennessee.

"If they gave this award for this show tonight, I'd have to give it to Reba McEntire's performance," Brooks said, also praising Kelsea Ballerini and Luke Combs, who won two honours.

All eyes seemed to be on Underwood, who had a successful year with her album "Cry Pretty" and an all-female tour, for an entertainer of the year win. The last woman to win the prize was Taylor Swift and Underwood was this year's sole female nominee.

Underwood hosted the show alongside McEntire and Dolly Parton, though she didn't win any awards. Underwood did win in a way — she won over the audience: She was a vocal beast, hitting all the right notes and more during a smoky performance of "Drinking Alone."

Morris, however, marked a big night for female country acts by taking home album of the year for "GIRL." The award also went to her producer busbee, who died in September from cancer.

"I would be really remiss if I didn't mention a huge facet of why this album sounds the way it does, and we miss him so dearly. He texted me the morning that we got the nomination for album of the year this year, and we were so excited, and that's our friend busbee," a teary-eyed Morris said onstage. "His wife Jess is here tonight and she looks so beautiful. Thank you for sharing your husband with us once a month, and my heart just goes out to you and your beautiful daughters. I hope when they listen to this record or any of the songs that he made that made us all better, they know how amazing their father was."

Kacey Musgraves, who won four Grammys this year, picked up female vocalist of the year and music video of the year for "Rainbow."

"The female creative spirit, the female energy is really needed right now, it's really important and I feel like it's something that Earth needs. So whether it's me that's up here or any of the other women in this category, I just think that it's a beautiful thing and I'm very appreciative," Musgraves said.
