Elisabeth Moss to star in 'The Invisible Man' reboot

Los Angeles

Elisabeth Moss is officially on board "The Invisible Man" reboot, based on the classic 1897 sci-fi novel by HG Wells. "The Handmaid's Tale" star was in early talks for the Universal-Blumhouse production, Deadline reported. This would be Moss' second collaboration with Blumhouse after Jordan Peele's recent critically-acclaimed hit, "Us". Leigh Whannell wrote and is directing the film. He will co-produce alongside Blumhouse. The novel has been adapted for both the big screen and television over the years. Its most notable adaptation is the 1933 black-and-white film, featuring Claude Rains in the title role.

Emilia, Sophie share excitement over GoT season finale

Los Angeles

The final season of 'Game of Thrones' premiered on April 14. While excitement level among fans is at an all-time high to find out who will ultimately win the Iron Throne, the latest posts of actors Emilia Clarke and Sophie Turner on social media is proof that even the cast of the series is ecstatic about the final season's premiere. Sophie, who plays the role of Sansa Stark in the series, shared a picture on Instagram where she can be seen sleeping on the sets of the show. "In honour of the final season of Thrones premiering tonight... Here's a picture of me asleep on set," she wrote alongside the photograph. Meanwhile, Emilia, who plays Daenerys Targaryen in the show, posted an adorable photo on Instagram and wrote: "Me and my baby (dragon) just very excited for you all to see season 8 game of thrones which if I'm not mistaken begins...now. gulp enjoy for the throne for the last time buckle up kids."

The final season will run for six episodes and each episode could run as long as 90 minutes, The Hollywood Reporter had confirmed last month. The April premiere date will also make GoT eligible for the 2019 Emmys. Although GoT is set to culminate with the eighth season, HBO had, last month, revealed that fans would get to see 'Game of Thrones: The Last Watch', a two-hour feature documentary that chronicles the making of the final season.

When Harington broke down in front of a GoT fan

Kit Harington
Los Angeles

Actor Kit Harington says he broke down and cried in front of a "Game of Thrones" fan after filming the show's final season. Harington is about to say goodbye to the character he has inhabited for the past eight years. And letting go of Jon Snow proved to be difficult for Harington. In an episode of "The Graham Norton Show", the 32-year-old star admitted that he got emotional in front of a fan on the street after filming wrapped, reports dailymail.co.uk. "She backed off pretty quickly," he said of the fan in question. The actor added: "I was determined to be cool about the end and decided that when people came up to me and said, 'Are you Jon Snow?' that I would say very calmly, 'I used to be'."

Russo Brothers take on 'heavier' film after 'Avengers'

Los Angeles

"Avengers: Endgame" directors Joe and Anthony Russo, collectively known as the Russo Brothers, are set to join forces with actor Tom Holland again. This time for a smaller film that has a "bit heavier material". "We are going to do our next movie with Tom Holland, who plays Spider-Man," Joe said here on Monday. The directors and Holland have worked together in Marvel films "Captain America: Civil War", "Avengers: Infinity War" and "Avengers: Endgame". Talking about their next film, Joe said: "It is a smaller film about a war veteran who comes home with PTSD and develops a heroin addiction." "So, it's a bit heavier material... We thought it was an important issue to tackle," he added. The directors are here to promote "Avengers: Endgame", the 22nd film of the Marvel Cinematic Universe.

'Blue Bloods' renewed for season 10

Los Angeles

The show "Blue Bloods" has been renewed for a 10th season, with series lead Tom Selleck inking a new deal to return in his role. The police drama is about a multi-generational family of New York City police officers. Selleck plays Police Commissioner Frank Reagan, who heads both the police force and his family, reports variety.com. Reagan's brood includes seasoned detective Danny (Donnie Wahlberg), Assistant District Attorney Erin (Bridget Moynahan), and Jamie (Will Estes), who left a future career in law to follow in the family footsteps.

Not interested in getting more famous: Maisie Williams

Los Angeles

"Game of Thrones" star Maisie Williams says the epic fantasy series has given her a lot of fame but she is not interested in working towards increasing her popularity. The 22-year-old actor tasted success with her stint as Arya Stark in the HBO series, which is in its final season. The first of episode of season eight premiered in the US on April 14. "I still see ignorant comments feel like I personally have to remove myself, because I had a taste of that sort of fame with this show and I made a vow to myself: I do not want that. "My agents say things to me like, 'We'll raise your profile', and I don't really understand what that means because to me it sounds like getting a whole lot more famous, which is something I'm not interested in. If this show is the greatest thing I ever do, I did OK. I didn't do too bad," Williams told The Observer.

John Travolta, Kelly Preston pay homage to son

Los Angeles

Actors John Travolta and Kelly Preston honoured their son Jett on what would have been his 27th birthday. The "American Crime Story" actor and his wife took to Instagram on April 13 to pay tribute to their eldest child who died in 2009, reports aceshowbiz.com. Jett, who had autism and suffered other serious health issues, died at the age of 16, after hitting his head on a bathtub when he suffered a seizure during a family trip to the Bahamas. Travolta shared some fan art of his son, and wrote alongside the portrait: "A painting a fan made of my son Jett! Happy birthday my son I love you!"

Directing makes me much better actor: Brie Larson

Los Angeles

Oscar winning-actress Brie Larson donned the director's hat for her new project "Unicorn Store". She says her new directing duties have made her a better actor. Larson, who has become the first to lead a female superhero in the Marvel Cinematic Universe with "Captain Marvel", feels that having the knowledge of directing films has improved her as an actor. "Directing makes me a much better actor because you see the entire process. Actors don't get to be part of pre-production as much...they are not seeing what everybody does on the team," Larson told media during the promotion of her forthcoming film "Avengers: Endgame" here on Monday.

Madonna announces new album 'Madame X'

Los Angeles

After months of hinting that new music was on the way, singer Madonna has finally revealed the name of an upcoming project. She has given her fans a sense of what her new tunes may sound like via some tantalising social media posts, reports forbes.com.

Madonna

The singer uploaded a video to both Instagram and Twitter on April 14, in which she shared that she has decided to name her new album "Madame X", though she doesn't state when it may arrive. The name seems to refer to a character, or perhaps an alter ego that Madonna has created, who she describes as "a secret agent / travelling around the world / changing identities / fighting for freedom / bringing light to dark places".
