She may have studied genetics and public health, but Fidda Al-Marzouqi has found success in a decidedly more creative field in her home town of Abu Dhabi.

The designer and founder of fashion atelier Cabochon spoke about her personal style and the challenges she faced while making the transition to the studio.

"I've always loved anything to do with design and I've also always loved fashion, dressing myself up," she said, explaining why she chose to test the waters of sartorial design while maintaining her day job as a senior health officer.

"A lot of people would always ask for my advice on how to style a certain
