TDT | Manama

The Meteorology Directorate has announced that Bahrain will see an improvement in weather conditions starting Monday, September 22, with the return of northwesterly winds.

Officials said the change will bring lower humidity levels, making the weather feel less hot and more comfortable, especially during the evenings.

The northwesterly winds are expected to continue until Thursday, September 25, with speeds ranging from moderate to strong at times.

The directorate warned that the winds may cause high waves at sea and dust storms in open areas.

New US veto

AFF | United Nations

The United States yesterday again wielded its veto and thwarted a UN Security Council call for a ceasefire in Gaza, shielding its ally Israel from meaningful diplomatic pressure.

Mohammed Darwish
TDT | Manama

A woman accused of forging a Ministry of Health Covid-19 test result and quarantine certificate is facing a retrial after the High Criminal Court overturned an earlier sentence that handed her a year in prison, a BD500 fine, and deportation.

A new hearing is scheduled next Sunday.

The woman, of Asian nationality, had been working for a cosmetics firm when she sent her employer a message via WhatsApp.

She claimed she had tested positive for Covid-19 and would be isolating for two weeks.

Attached to the message was a photograph of what appeared to be an official Ministry of Health test result bearing her name and confirming infection. She did not return to work.

details and noticed discrepancies.

He contacted the Team Bahrain hotline to verify the result. Staff requested a copy of the attachment.

After checking, they informed him there was no record of such a test. He lodged a police report.

Investigators concluded that the woman had fabricated both the test result and the quarantine certificate.

Documents

She had designed them to mimic genuine documents issued by the Ministry of Health through its electronic platform.

A check of the ministry’s database confirmed no test had been recorded for the woman on the date shown.

During questioning by the Public Prosecution, the woman admitted to forging the documents.

Global cyber fraud gang member falls

TDI | Manama

The High Criminal Court has sentenced a man in his thirties of Asian nationality to three years in prison, a BD3,000 fine, and subsequent deportation for his involvement in an international cyber fraud network that targeted victims through phone calls and text messages.

The case unfolded after a victim reported receiving a call from an individual posing as a ministry employee, who claimed he could secure the victim's bank account and recover previously stolen funds.

The fraudster persuaded the victim to provide his one-time password (OTP), after which BD1,100 was withdrawn from the account.

Investigations traced the stolen funds to the defendant's account.

Authorities said he withdrew the money and transferred it abroad, confirming his active participation in a broader network specializing in duping victims into disclosing security codes, which were then used to access and drain bank accounts.

◆ US President Donald Trump confirmed he would speak to Chinese counterpart Xi Jinping on Friday about a deal to change ownership of the hugely popular video-sharing app TikTok. Trump has repeatedly put off a ban against TikTok under a law designed to force the app's sale from its Chinese parent company ByteDance for national security reasons. Trump announced a deal earlier this week and said he would speak to Xi. "We're speaking to President Xi on Friday to see if we can finalise something on Tiktok, because there is tremendous value," Trump said at a press conference with British Prime Minister Keir Starmer during a state visit. Under the deal TikTok would be "owned by all American investors, and very rich people and companies", Trump said.

◆ Shares in chipmaker Intel skyrocketed yesterday after AI giant Nvidia announced it would invest $5 billion in its struggling rival. The investment represents a significant commitment to Intel's turnaround efforts. Nvidia joins Japanese investment giant SoftBank and the US government in backing the once-dominant chipmaker, which has fallen behind in recent years after missing key technology shifts. "This marks a fusion of two world-class platforms," said Nvidia CEO Jensen Huang. "Together, we will expand our ecosystems and lay the foundation for the next era of computing." The Trump administration surprised the tech industry last month by taking a 10 percent equity stake in Intel, recognizing the strategic importance of the company that powered the PC and internet revolution with its processors.

◆ President Donald Trump said yesterday that he was working to "get back" the Bagram airbase in Afghanistan, which the United States gave up control of shortly before the Taliban takeover of the country in 2021. "We're trying to get it back, by the way, that could be a little breaking news. We're trying to get it back because they need things from us," Trump said at a press conference with British Prime Minister Keir Starmer. "We want that base back," Trump said, adding that "one of the reasons we want the base is, as you know, it's an hour away from where China makes its nuclear weapons". US officials did not immediately clarify what Trump meant when he said Washington was trying to get the base back.

Egypt says stolen pharaoh's bracelet melted down, sold for $4,000

AFP | Cairo, Egypt

Egyptian police said yesterday they arrested a museum employee and three alleged accomplices after a priceless ancient gold bracelet was stolen from Cairo's Egyptian Museum, sold for about $4,000 and then melted down. The 3,000-year-old bracelet, a gold band adorned with lapis lazuli beads, dated back to the reign of Amenemope, a pharaoh of Egypt's 21st Dynasty (1070-945 BC). The priceless artefact had been kept under lock and key when it disappeared, a few weeks before it was meant to be exhibited in Italy. Museum staff reported it missing from a metal safe in the museum's conservation lab on Saturday, a statement from Egypt's interior ministry said. Investigations showed a restoration specialist working at the museum stole the bracelet on September 9 while on duty. A silver trader in central Cairo helped her facilitate the sale, the police said, first to a gold dealer for 180,000 Egyptian pounds ($3,735), who then sold it to a worker at a gold foundry for 194,000 pounds ($4,025). The bracelet was then melted down along with other scrap gold, the ministry said. The suspects were taken into custody and confessed to the crime, according to authorities. Security camera footage released by Egyptian authorities shows a bracelet being exchanged for a wad of cash in a shop, before the buyer cuts it in two. However, the blurry images suggest the bracelet lacks the distinctive lapis lazuli bead seen in official photos shared a day earlier. Egyptian media outlets had earlier reported the loss was discovered during an inventory check ahead of the "Treasures of the Pharaohs" exhibition scheduled in Rome next month. Under Egyptian law, stealing an antiquity with the intent to smuggle it is punishable by life imprisonment and a fine of 1 to 5 million Egyptian pounds (around $20,000-$100,000), while damaging or defacing antiquities carries up to seven years in prison and a fine of up to 1 million pounds.

Israel bombards Gaza City

Displaced Palestinians move with their belongings southwards on a road in the Nuseirat refugee camp area in the central Gaza Strip following renewed Israeli evacuation orders for Gaza City

Army says four soldiers killed

AFP | Gaza City, Palestinian Territories

Israeli tanks and jets pounded Gaza City, the target of a major ground offensive, yesterday prompting Palestinians to flee south, where the Israeli military announced the deaths of four soldiers. AFP journalists and witnesses saw a steady stream of Gazans heading south on foot, in vehicles and on donkey carts -- their meagre belongings piled high. "There is artillery fire, air strikes, quadcopter and drone gunfire. The bombing never stops," said Aya Ahmed, 32, sheltering with 13 relatives in Gaza City. "The world doesn't understand what is happening. They (Israel) want us to evacuate south -- but where will we live? There are no tents, no transport, no money." Palestinians say the cost of a ride to the south has soared, in some cases topping $1,000. "The situation is indescribable -- crowds everywhere, the sound of explosions, women and men crying and screaming as they walked while carrying their belongings," said Shadi Jawad, 47, describing his family's ordeal as they fled their home on Wednesday. "God, send a missile to take us out and relieve us," he said. The offensive has sparked international outrage, with the territory already devastated by nearly two years of war and the Gaza City area gripped by a UN-declared famine. It comes ahead of a planned move by several Western countries, including France and Britain, to recognise a Palestinian state later this month at the UN. US President Donald Trump, currently on a visit to Britain, said Thursday he had a "disagreement" with British Prime Minister Keir Starmer over this. "Unfit for human dignity" "The military incursion and evacuation orders in northern Gaza are driving new waves of displacement, forcing traumatised families into an ever-shrinking area unfit for human dignity," World Health Organization chief Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said on X. "Hospitals, already overwhelmed, are on the brink of collapse as escalating violence blocks access and prevents WHO from delivering lifesaving supplies," he warned. Gaza City's Al-Shifa Hospital said it had received the bodies of 33 people killed in Israeli strikes since midnight. The Israeli military said it continued to target " Hamas terror infrastructure" and was also operating in the southern areas of Rafah and Khan Yunis. Media restrictions in the territory and difficulties in accessing many areas mean AFP is unable to independently verify the details provided by the civil defence or the Israeli military. Hamas's armed wing, the Ezzedine al-Qassam Brigades, warned the military to expect fierce fighting. "We are ready to send the lives of your soldiers to hell, and we have prepared for you an army of martyrs," the group said in a statement. "Gaza will be a cemetery for your soldiers." Later on Thursday the Israeli military said four of its soldiers had been killed using an explosive device in Rafah, in southern Gaza. Meanwhile, a Jordanian driving an aid truck from Jordan to Gaza shot dead two Israelis at the Allenby crossing between the Israeli-occupied West Bank and the kingdom, both countries said. "This is the result of the echoing of Hamas's campaign of lies," the foreign ministry said on X. Jordan condemned the attack, saying it jeopardised the delivery of aid, with the Israeli military later calling for aid from Jordan to be halted. The US-backed offensive on Gaza City began on Tuesday and came as a United Nations probe accused Israel of committing "genocide" in the Gaza Strip, saying Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and other senior officials had incited the crime.

Putin has let me down, says Trump at end of UK state visit

Starmer called for more pressure on Putin

● Signed a huge tech cooperation deal with Starmer

● The deal comes on the back of pledges of £150 billion ($205 billion) of investment into the UK

AFP | Chequers, United Kingdom

Donald Trump warned that Russian President Vladimir Putin had "really let me down" after he met Prime Minister Keir Starmer yesterday, the final day of the US president's historic UK state visit.

A day after King Charles III treated him to royal pageantry at Windsor Castle, Trump appeared at a news conference with Starmer and spared him the harsh criticism he has doled out to other leaders -- although he suggested the UK leader could use the military to curb immigration.

Starmer meanwhile gently nudged Trump on Ukraine and called for more pressure on Putin, as he tries to bridge the divide between Trump and European allies on Kyiv.

Trump, who has long been friendly with Putin, then issued a rebuke to the Russian leader for continuing the war.

"The one that I thought would be easiest would be because of my relationship with President Putin, but he's let me down," Trump said.

"He's really let me down."

He urged European nations to stop buying Russian oil, saying that "if the price of oil comes down, Putin's going to drop out of that war".

'Unbreakable bond'

Referring to Starmer, Trump said "one of our few disagreements" was over the UK's plan to recognise a Palestinian state.

Britain's Prime Minister Keir Starmer (R) and US President Donald Trump (L) show off their signed technology prosperity deal

The US leader, embroiled in an immigration crackdown at home, offered his thoughts on immigration in Britain, revealing: "I told the prime minister I would stop it", even if it meant calling in the military.

But for the rest of the time at the prime minister's official country house north of London, the two leaders seemed on the same page, as Trump hailed America's "unbreakable bond" with Britain and signed a huge tech cooperation deal with Starmer.

At the signing ceremony attended by a host of US tech CEOs, Starmer said he and Trump were "leaders who genuinely like each other".

The deal comes on the back of pledges of £150 billion ($205 billion) of investment into the UK from US giants including Microsoft, Google and Blackstone.

Trump had earlier said goodbye to King Charles at Windsor, calling him a "great gentleman and a great king".

The US president and First Lady Melania Trump wrapped up their visit later Thursday, flying out after less than 48 hours on British soil.

'Highest honours'

With investment deals and a deepening alignment on Ukraine to show for the diplomatic effort, Starmer can claim some justification for granting Trump an unprecedented second state visit.

But the British leader still faces political trouble at home after sacking his ambassador to Washington, Peter Mandelson, over his connections to disgraced late financier Jeffrey Epstein.

Sex offender Epstein has also haunted Trump in recent weeks with further revelations about the pair's relationship in the 1990s and early 2000s.

Trump, however, helped Starmer out, by claiming not to know Mandelson -- despite having hosted the envoy in the Oval Office to seal Britain's trade deal with the US in May.

Trump was lavished with the full pomp of the British state on Wednesday -- the second time it has done so, after his first visit in 2019.

"This is truly one of the highest honours of my life," Trump said at the state banquet.

The king meanwhile hailed Trump's peace efforts and support for Ukraine after a day featuring gun salutes, soldiers on horseback and bagpipes -- all designed to appeal to the US president's fascination with royalty.

Melania remained in Windsor on Thursday morning, where she met scouts with Princess Catherine, and viewed Queen Mary's Doll's House with Queen Camilla.

The US first lady's husband, though, was kept far from the British public, with an estimated 5,000 people marching through central London Wednesday to protest against his visit.

UN Security Council to vote on Iran nuclear sanctions today

AFP | United Nations, United States

The UN Security Council will vote today on whether to reimpose sanctions on Iran over its nuclear program, the Council's rotating presidency said, after Britain, France and Germany triggered the vote.

The three European countries, signatories to the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action intended to stop Tehran obtaining nuclear weapons, allege that Iran has broken its promises under that 2015 treaty.

Diplomatic sources expect that the resolution will not have the nine positive votes needed to uphold the status quo -- in which sanctions remain lifted -- and as such the punishment will be reimposed.

French President Emmanuel Macron said he expected international sanctions against Iran to be reinstated by the end of the month, in an excerpt from an Israeli television interview broadcast Thursday.

In a letter to the UN in mid-August, the "European Three" slammed Iran as having breached several JCPOA commitments, including building up a uranium stock to more than 40 times the level permitted under the deal.

'Unambiguous legal grounds'

The hard-won 2015 deal has been left in tatters ever since the United States, during Donald Trump's first presidency, walked away from it in 2018 and reimposed sanctions on Iran.

Western powers and Israel have long accused Tehran of seeking to acquire nuclear weapons, a claim Iran denies.

Following the US withdrawal, Tehran gradually broke away from its commitments under the agreement and began stepping up its nuclear activities, with tensions high since the 12-day war between Iran and Israel in June. The war also derailed Tehran's nuclear negotiations with

For most decisions, at least 9 out of 15 members must vote in favour -- but for major issues (like peacekeeping missions, sanctions, or admitting new members), all five permanent members (China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom, and the United States) must also agree. If even one of them votes "no," it's called a veto, and the resolution fails, no matter how many other countries support it.

the United States and prompted Iran to suspend cooperation with the IAEA, with inspectors of the Vienna-based UN body leaving the country shortly afterwards. During his previous term, Trump attempted to trigger the so-called "snapback clause" to reimpose sanctions in 2020, but failed due to his country's unilateral withdrawal two years earlier. While European powers have for years launched repeated efforts to revive the 2015 deal through negotiations and said they "have unambiguous legal grounds" to trigger the clause, Iran does not share their view.

Bahrain Indian School Celebrates Nutrition Week 2025 with Innovation and Awareness

Manama

Bhavans-Bahrain Indian School (BIS) successfully hosted Nutrition Week 2025 from September 7 through 12, transforming its campus into a vibrant hub of health awareness and nutritional learning.

The week-long initiative reflected the school's steadfast commitment to fostering holistic development, nurturing both mind and body alongside academic growth.

The celebration, which engaged students from Grades 1 through 12, was meticulously curated to integrate theoretical knowledge with practical application, equipping learners with the skills to make informed dietary choices that can last a lifetime.

Early Years: Building the Foundation

Students in Grades 1 to 3 explored the theme "Balanced Diet Platter." With charts, food models, and creative crafts, young learners designed their ideal meals while identifying key food groups and understanding the importance of a balanced diet.

Middle Grades: Showcasing Healthy Choices

Grades 4 to 5 brought enthusiasm to the "Healthy Snack Showcase," where students presented homemade, nutrient-rich snacks such as fruit kebabs, vegetable dips, whole-grain sandwiches, and yoghurt parfaits.

The interactive activity combined taste with education, underscoring the value of replacing processed foods with wholesome alternatives.

Adolescents: Critical Food Awareness

In Grades 6 to 8, students became "Nutritional Detectives" through the project "Sneak a Peek at What You Eat." By maintaining food journals, analysing dietary patterns, and decoding food labels, students uncovered hidden sugars, salts, and unhealthy additives.

Their findings were presented in reflective discussions and charts, cultivating both critical thinking and self-awareness about daily consumption.

Senior Years: Innovation of Cooking without Fire

The highlight of the week was the "Cooking Without Fire" competition for Grades 9 to 12. Teams showcased culinary creativity with recipes for nutrient-dense, no-cook meals, ranging from colourful salads and smoothie bowls to oat-based energy bars. The contest not only displayed culinary innovation but also emphasised the importance of healthy eating for today's youth.

Campus-Wide Impact

Throughout the week, classrooms and common areas displayed student-designed posters featuring nutritional facts, eating tips, and the benefits of vitamins and minerals. This visual campaign amplified the message of Nutrition Week across the school community.

The school leadership underscored the significance of the initiative.

Director Mr. Himanshu Verma, & Mrs. Ritu Verma, emphasised the importance of cultivating nutritious food habits from an early age, noting that such awareness lays the foundation for lifelong wellness. "Nutrition Week goes beyond raising awareness; it instills lifelong habits of conscious and mindful living," said Mr. Himanshu Verma. "At BIS, we believe education is incomplete without attention to the well-being of the whole person", added Mrs. Ritu Verma.

Principal Mr. Saji Jacob highlighted how the activities help students internalise values and translate learning into real-life practice, reinforcing the connection between education, health, and personal growth.

By blending creativity, research, and innovation, Nutrition Week 2025 at BIS stood as a model of holistic education, empowering students to become not only academically proficient but also health-conscious global citizens. The initiative reaffirmed the school's pledge to cultivate a culture of wellness, awareness, and sustainable lifestyle choices for its entire community.

Google pauses Chrome 'Homework Help' after backlash from educators

TDT | agencies

Google has temporarily disabled a new "Homework Help" button in its Chrome browser following widespread criticism from educators who warned it could promote cheating and undermine learning.

The tool, introduced earlier this month, was designed to assist students by interpreting questions on educational websites through Google Lens and then generating AI-powered answers. However, many teachers and universities argued that the feature was rolled out without consultation and risked bypassing genuine study and problem-solving.

Faculty members from leading institutions, including the University of California campuses and Emory University, voiced concerns about academic integrity, data privacy, and the ethics of embedding such technology directly into a web browser. They noted that while AI can play a constructive role in education, providing automatic answers to tests and assignments crosses into dishonest territory.

In response to the backlash, Google announced that it was "pausing" the feature while it reviews feedback. The company has not clarified whether Homework Help will return in a revised form or be scrapped altogether.

The controversy highlights the growing tension between technological innovation and the classroom. Schools and universities around the world are grappling with how to balance AI's potential benefits—such as tutoring, feedback, and personalised learning—with the risks of over-reliance and academic misconduct.

For students, the debate raises important questions: where should the line be drawn between seeking support and taking shortcuts? Some argue that AI can make education more accessible, while others worry it discourages critical thinking.

As Google reconsiders its approach, educators are calling for greater dialogue between tech companies and academic institutions to ensure that tools intended to help students do not compromise the very purpose of education.

The "Homework Help" button appears automatically in the URL bar (omnibox) in Google Chrome when visiting many educational or LMS (Learning Management System) websites like Canvas, D2L, or Sakai. Clicking it uses Google Lens to capture content from the page (e.g. quiz questions) and offers AI-generated answers.

Bahrain’s senior national football team will play two friendlies in Morocco during the October FIFA international window. The Reds are scheduled to face hosts Morocco on 9 October in Rabat, with kick-off at 8pm local time. Three days later, they will meet Egypt in Mohammedia on 12 October.

Both games are being staged under the invitation of the Royal Moroccan Football Federation, which confirmed hosting arrangements to the Bahrain Football Association. The fixtures were originally planned to be held in Bahrain, with Egypt visiting for two matches, but the schedule shifted after Morocco extended the invitation.

For head coach Dragan Talajic, the pair of friendlies provide an important opportunity to test his squad against top African opposition. Morocco were 2022 World Cup semi-finalists, while Egypt are seven-time African champions. Bahrain will then turn their focus to November’s Arab Cup qualifier against Djibouti, which they must win to book their place in Group D alongside Algeria, Iraq, and either Lebanon or Sudan.

Muharraq storm to ACL Two start

TDT | Manama

Muharraq began their 2025-26 AFC Champions League (ACL) Two campaign in style with a comfortable 4-0 win over Jordan’s Al Wehdah at the Shaikh Ali Bin Mohammed Bin Isa Al Khalifa Stadium in Arad.

Portuguese forward Elliot Jorge Simoes Inacio opened the scoring in the 18th minute, before Brazilian midfielder Arther Rodrigues Rezende doubled the lead with a long-range strike seven minutes later. In the closing stages, Lucas Morelato added a third and an Ahmad Tha’er own goal in stoppage time sealed the win.

The result put Muharraq second in Group A behind Al Wasl of the UAE, who hammered Esteghlal of Iran 7-1 in Dubai.

Fellow Bahraini side Al Khaldiya, meanwhile, were forced to settle for a goalless draw away to Qatar’s Al Ahli SC. Despite creating late chances, most notably through Saudi forward Badar Bashir, Khaldiya could not find a breakthrough.

Both Bahraini clubs are among 32 teams from 22 member associations competing in ACL Two’s restructured format. The tournament sits just below the AFC Champions League Elite and above the AFC Challenge League.

McLaughlin-Levrone powers to 400m world gold

Second fastest time ever

AFP | Tokyo, Japan

US track star Sydney McLaughlin-Levrone ran the second fastest time ever to win a stunning gold in the women’s 400 metres at the world championships on Thursday.

The 26-year-old American clocked 47.78sec on a rain-slicked Tokyo track to smash the previous championship record of 47.99sec set by Jarmila Kratochvilova of then-Czechoslovakia in 1983.

Defending champion and Olympic gold medalist Marileidy Paulino took silver in a Dominican Republic record of 47.98sec -- the third fastest of all time. Bahrain’s Salwa Eid Naser claimed bronze in 48.19sec.

“It was really about trying to stay as relaxed as possible,” said McLaughlin-Levrone, who

US’ Sydney McLaughlin-Levrone celebrates

The 26-year-old American clocked 47.78sec on a rain-slicked Tokyo track to smash the previous championship record of 47.99sec set by Jarmila Kratochvilova of then-Czechoslovakia in 1983.

“At the end of the day, this wasn’t my title to hold on to, it was mine to gain,” she said.

“Bobby uses boxing terms all the time. He said ‘You’ve got to go out there and take the belt, it’s not yours and you’ve got to go earn it’.

“So it really just was about running the best race I could and I’m grateful that we were able to do that.”

Having smashed the US record in the semi-final, McLaughlin-Levrone looked set to unleash something big in the final, perhaps even threatening Marita Koch’s 40-year-old world record of 47.60sec.

So it proved.

McLaughlin-Levrone was drawn in lane five, outside Cuba’s Roxana Gomez and inside Britain’s world indoor champion Amber Anning.

Temperatures at the National Stadium had dipped from recent sultry conditions and steady rain fell.

But the wet track made no difference as McLaughlin-Levrone motored out of her blocks.

By the halfway mark she had already gone past Anning and she ran a fine curve to put herself ahead in the home straight.

Paulino briefly looked like she might threaten from the outside lane, but McLaughlin-Levrone, credited her coach Bobby Kersee with her transition from the 400m hurdles, in which she won two Olympic golds and holds the world record.

with her eyes glued on the clock, used every sinew in her body to propel herself over the line.

She crossed it in a championship record, but fell agonisingly short of the record set by Koch of then-East Germany in Canberra in 1985, one of the oldest in the books.

The golden girl of US track and field was left gasping for oxygen and seemingly shell-shocked.

She enjoyed a brief moment’s respite sat on a chair, with a bottle of water, tucked away from the public eye.

But then she returned to the track, to rapturous applause, to soak up the plaudits, don an American flag and search out her husband Andre in the stands for a kiss.

McLaughlin-Levrone’s presence in the 400m, as opposed to the 400m hurdles, has certainly revived an event that has lacked spark in recent years.

And her victory will go a long way to silencing those detractors who questioned her decision to step away from the 400m hurdles, an event in which she went unbeaten for six seasons, to focus on the flat race.

“I know there was a lot of doubt from a lot of people for me making this switch and I just wanted to show myself I can do it,” she said.

“I see things online. I see what people say and ultimately, that’s okay. I think that’s what makes the sport great. I think they want to see great matchups.

“They want to see people be uncomfortable and I think today was a really great race for track and field.”

McLaughlin-Levrone was one of the stars when Tokyo hosted the Covid-delayed Olympic Games in 2021.

She set a world record of 51.46sec when winning 400m hurdles gold in one of the standout performances of those Games.

Despite their emphatic closing victory, Al Hala's overall record was not enough to secure a top-four place and a spot in the semi-finals.

Swiatek faces battling Krejcikova in Korea Open quarter-finals

AFP | Seoul, South Korea

Iga Swiatek blew off the cobwebs from her US Open disappointment to ease into a quarter-final against battling Barbora Krejcikova at the Korea Open on Thursday.

Six-time Grand Slam champion Swiatek was never in serious trouble as she beat Romania's Sorana Cirstea 6-3, 6-2 in Seoul.

World number two Swiatek was stunned in straight sets by eventual finalist Amanda Anisimova in the last eight a fortnight ago at New York, where she triumphed in 2022.

Barbora Krejcikova of Czechia

"For sure, the conditions are much different from our last tournament," the Pole told the crowd in the South Korean capital, where there has been heavy rain this week.

"Happy that I could adjust quickly. I really love it here, it's beautiful when it's not raining, so happy to be here."

Swiatek, whose father Tomasz competed in rowing at the 1988 Seoul Olympics, sealed the first set against Cirstea in 49 minutes on her sixth set point.

The top seed carried that momentum into the second set, breaking the Romanian immediately and, despite a few wobbles, Swiatek sealed the match with minimum fuss.

The 24-year-old, who is chasing a 25th WTA singles title, will play Krejcikova after the unseeded Czech battled back to beat Emma Raducanu 4-6, 7-6 (12/10), 6-1.

Britain's Raducanu, the 2021 US Open champion and eighth seed in Seoul, squandered three match points as two-time former major champion Krejcikova prevailed in a late-night thriller.

Also into the quarter-finals on Friday is second seed Ekaterina Alexandrova, who plays unseeded Ella Seidel of Germany.
