UAE president accepts US invitation to join 'Board of Peace'

A permanent seat costs $1.0 billion

● Charter does not seem to limit its role to the Strip

● If not paid, member countries will serve no longer than three years

AFP | Dubai, United Arab Emirates

The UAE's president has accepted an invitation to join US President Donald Trump's "Board of Peace", the foreign ministry said yesterday, the body meant to oversee post-war reconstruction in Gaza.

The positive response comes amid controversy over the body, with Washington asking various leaders to sit

China confirms invited to join Trump's 'Board of Peace'

AFP | Beijing, China

Beijing confirmed yesterday that China had been invited to join US President Donald Trump's "Board of Peace". "China has received the United States' invitation," foreign ministry spokesman Guo Jiakun told a regular news briefing, without specifying whether Beijing would accept the invitation.

Guo said China-US relations had achieved overall stability in the past year, despite a trade war that saw both countries impose tit-for-tat tariffs on each others' products.

"Over the past year, China-US relations have experienced ups and downs, but have maintained overall dynamic stability," Guo told reporters.

"Cooperation between China and the US benefits both sides, while confrontation harms both," he added.

on the Trump-chaired board on which a permanent seat costs $1.0 billion.

Although originally meant to oversee Gaza's rebuilding, its charter does not seem to limit its role to the Strip, and appears to want to rival the United Nations.

"Sheikh Mohamed bin Zayed Al Nahyan, President of the United Arab Emirates, has accepted the invitation from the United States to join the Board of Peace," the ministry said in a statement.

The board's charter, seen by AFP, says that member countries will serve no longer than three years, subject to renewal by the chairman.

However, the three-year restriction does not apply if they "contribute more than USD $1,000,000,000 in cash funds to the Board of Peace within the first year of the Charter's entry into force".

Heavy snow in US strands drivers in 100-vehicle crash

Washington, United States

Law enforcement officials said Monday they were working to clear roads after a 100-vehicle crash occurred on snow-blanketed roads in the northern state of Michigan.

Michigan State Police said numerous injuries were reported in the crash, with none "believed to be fatal," after big rig trucks and vehicles collided on the I-196 corridor, causing many vehicles to run off the road in "multiple slide offs."

The Monday morning incident included 30-40 semi-trucks, piled up and blocking the typically busy interstate road, which remained closed hours later.

Officials urged motorists to slow down in "treacherous" conditions Monday, with a winter storm continuing to dump snow on the region and temperatures expected to fall to -8 degrees Fahrenheit (-22 degrees Celsius) including wind chill.

US warns against EU tariff 'bazooka' over Greenland

AFP | Davos, Switzerland

The US trade envoy yesterday warned European nations against using its tariff "bazooka" in response to President Donald Trump's threat to acquire Greenland, saying it would "not be wise".

French President Emmanuel Macron in particular has urged use of the EU's anti-coercion instrument (ACI) after Trump threatened tariffs of up to 25 percent on eight European countries.

"Every country is going to do what's in their national interests," US Trade Representative Jamieon Greer told a small group of journalists at the Davos summit.

"And those have natural consequences," he said, adding that deploying the ACI "would not be wise" -- echoing comments from US Secretary Treasury Scott Bessent at Davos on Monday.

The EU has never deployed the instrument, aimed at dissuading countries from exerting geopolitical pressure on the bloc.

But even as some officials push for talks to de-escalate a crisis that has dominated the Davos summit so far, others are urging the EU to stand up to "blackmail" over the autonomous Danish territory.

Asked about the US response if the EU deems Greenland "non-negotiable", Greer said "If that's the case, then so be it."

"What I've found is that when countries follow my advice, they tend to do OK. When they don't crazy things happen," he added.

Separately, US Commerce Secretary Howard Lutnick told European countries "to keep the pressure and temperature low" with regards to threats of retaliatory tariffs.

UN report declares global state of 'water bankruptcy'

AFP | Paris, France

The world is entering an era of "global water bankruptcy" with rivers, lakes and aquifers depleting faster than nature can replenish them, a United Nations research institute said yesterday.

It argues that decades of overuse, pollution, environmental destruction and climate pressure had pushed many water systems so beyond the point of recovery that a new classification was required.

"Water stress and water crisis are no longer sufficient descriptions of the world's new water realities," read a new report by the UN University Institute for Water, Environment and Health (UNU-INWEH).

These terms were "framed as alerts about a future that could still be avoided" when the world had already moved into a "new phase", it said.
