Andrew Garfield reveals Emma Stone's reaction after he lied about 'Spider-Man' return

IAN S | Los Angeles

Actor Andrew Garfield, who dated Emma Stone after they met on the sets of 'The Amazing Spider-Man', has shared the reaction the actress had after he lied about his return as the superhero in 'Spider-Man: No Way Home'.

The British actor revealed that Stone kept on texting him about whether the rumours of his involvement in the new film were true, reports aceshowbiz.com.

"Emma kept on texting me. She was like, 'Are you in this new Spider-Man film?'" he recalled.

"And I was like, 'I don't know what you're talking about,'" the Golden Globe winner admitted.

He continued: "She was like, 'Shut up. Just tell me.' I'm like, 'I honestly don't know' - I kept it going, even with her."

After Stone watched 'No Way Home' and found out the truth, she was understandably upset with her former boyfriend.

Garfield shared: "And then she saw it. She was like, 'You're a jerk.'"

He further explained his position with the project: "I think that Tom had numerous times denied that he would reprise his role as Spider-Man in 'No Way Home' before it hit theatres.

"I heard about it. And I did see it. And it's a Photoshop," he said on 'The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon' in September 2021 after a leaked photo showed him wearing the suit again.

He further explained his position with the project: "I think that Tom Holland is just the perfect Peter Parker and Spider-Man, so I am super stoked. I get to just be a fan again, which is my preferred position.

"To be able to sit in the audience and kind of go, 'Yeah, you screwed up, mate. You didn't do it as well as you could have done, eh?' I get to be that guy that's just like, 'Yeah, I don't really love the suit.'"

In a recent interview with The Wrap, the 38-year-old actor admitted it was "stressful" to lie to the media.

"It was stressful, I'm not gonna lie. It was rather stressful but also weirdly enjoyable. It was like this massive game of Werewolf that I was playing with journalists and with people guessing, and it was very fun."

John Cena talks about why he isn't considering fatherhood

ANI | Washington

Hollywood star John Cena during his recent appearance on 'The Drew Barrymore Show', shared why he believes fatherhood is not the right move for him at the moment.

According to People magazine, the topic was brought up on the show after host and actor Drew Barrymore pointed out that Cena has granted more than 600 wishes for children through the organization, Make-A-Wish, and suggested that he would be "kind of the world's greatest father."

Before discussing the possibility, Cena talked about how he currently has a lot on his plate including being the "best" husband to wife Shay Shariatzadeh.

He said, "I really enjoy my life ... it is hard work. It is hard work to balance the time I need to run myself correctly. It's hard work to be the best husband I can be to my loving wife. It is hard to keep connections with those in my life I love and it is also hard to put in an honest day's work."

The star then shared his "perspective" on why men should consider becoming fathers. He explained, "I think just because you might be good at something, for me, it is not a strong enough reason to do that. You have to have passion for it. You have to have a fuel for it. It's like saying to someone 'you are pretty good with your hands, you would be a good carpenter.' But if I want to be an actor, I'll be an actor."

Gemma Arterton on her 'The King's Man' character: 'She's very tough, cleverest person in the room'

IAN S | Los Angeles

British actress-producer Gemma Arterton, who essays the character of Polly, the nanny of Harris Dickinson's Conrad in the recently released spy action comedy 'The King's Man', describes her character as an alpha that heads the household.

Talking about her character, the actress says, "She is Conrad's nanny, so she's taken care of him. But she's sort of the boss of everyone, including Oxford. She's very tough. She doesn't take any crap. She's the cleverest person in the room. She's very, very smart. But also very funny. A wise-cracker."

Rupert Grint compares JK Rowling to 'aunt I don't agree with'

IAN S | London

'Harry Potter' star Rupert Grint has spoken about the relationship he shares with author JK Rowling, who wrote the stories that helped propel him to fame.

Chatting with The Sunday Times, the 33-year-old actor said: "I liken JK Rowling to an auntie. I don't necessarily agree with everything my auntie says, but she's still my auntie. It's a tricky one."

Grint is likely referring to some of the tweets that Rowling has put out, as well as others she has retweeted and liked, that trans rights activists say hurt their cause and in turn, the lives of those who are trans, reports femalefirst.co.uk.

The author had previously tweeted: "If sex isn't real, the lived reality of women globally is erased. I know and love trans people, but erasing the concept of sex removes the ability of many to meaningfully discuss their lives."

Grint had spoken out in support of the trans community back in 2020, issuing a statement to Us Weekly that said: "I firmly stand with the trans community. Trans women are women. Trans men are men. We should all be entitled to live with love and without judgment."

He added, during a 2021 interview with Esquire: "I felt like I had to (speak) because I think it was important to," nothing that the trans community are "a valuable group that I think needs standing up for".

Rowling has been in the news for what some would describe as all the wrong reasons, as of late. She didn't take part in any new filming for the 'Return to Hogwarts' anniversary special, leading to many jumping to the conclusion that it was her stance on trans rights that led to that decision.

Katy Perry reveals beau Orlando Bloom's grossest habit

IAN S | Los Angeles

Pop star Katy Perry has revealed what her fiance and actor Orlando Bloom's "worst habit" is. She said it is leaving used dental floss all over their bathroom.

After being asked what bad habits her fiance has, the 37-year-old singer told hosts Amanda Holden and Jamie Theakston: "Oh my God, he loves to floss, which thank God because some partners don't and it's disgusting and he has brilliant teeth.

"But he leaves the floss, everywhere! On the side of my bed, and in the car, and on the kitchen table, I'm like, 'There are bins everywhere.'"

The 'American Idol' judge also gave some insight into her family's delayed but "amazing" Christmas celebrations, which took place on January 2 - and how it was the "favourite" Christmas she had ever had in her life, partly because of her daughter reaching an age where she understood what was happening.

Perry, who shares 16-month-old daughter Daisy with the 'Pirates of the Caribbean' star, said: "I celebrated Christmas with my family, which was amazing."
