Continuing the series on how 2026 is reshaping the global order, China argues that a multipolar world is taking shape and calls for greater openness, multilateralism, and stronger cooperation with partners including Bahrain. Read the perspective of His Excellency Mr. Ni Ruchi, Ambassador of the People's Republic of China to the Kingdom of Bahrain, on Page 2.

Five left dead in Tunisia flooding

AFP | Tunis
Tunisia

Flooding in Tunisia has killed five people, authorities said, as media reported four others missing yesterday after the country experienced its heaviest rainfall in over 70 years.

Four deaths occurred in the town of Moknine in the Monastir governorate, while a fifth death was reported in Nabeul town, civil defence spokesman Khalil Mechri said.

The National Institute of Meteorology has told AFP that some Tunisian regions had not seen so much rain since 1950.

Tunisia's civil defence said some of the hardest hit regions were Monastir, Nabeul and greater Tunis.

Heavy rain began Monday night and continued until Tuesday night, with showers on Wednesday.
