The third Asian Youth Games began in stirring fashion last night as Bahrain delivered a heartfelt opening ceremony inside Exhibition World Bahrain in Sakhir. The evening celebrated culture, history, and the promise of youth, uniting more than 4,000 athletes from 45 nations competing across 26 sports until the end of the month.

Receiving senior invitees and heads of delegations of the 3rd Asian Youth Games hosted under his patronage, His Majesty King Hamad bin Isa Al Khalifa emphasized that sports unite peoples through love, coexistence and tolerance, and that the gathering of Asia's youth in Bahrain is the real victory of the Games..

Last night's ceremony at Exhibition World Bahrain opened with Dana, one of the Games' official mascots, appearing at the centre of the stage to tell a tale of her homeland. She spoke of dreams, her ancestors, and Bahrain's bond with the pearl. Her grandfather's voice followed, offering words that no dream is out of reach and that the nation's young generation carries forward the determination that built its past. A glowing pearl shone as a beacon of heritage and hope.

Flags of all 26 nations were then raised as delegates paraded proudly, accompanied by drumming and sweeping modern lighting. When the Palestinian flag appeared, the crowd erupted in applause, joining the royal family in recognition.

The torch also paraded around the arena, and when His Highness Shaikh Nasser bin Hamad Al Khalifa declared the Games open, in the presence of His Highness Shaikh Khalid bin Hamad Al Khalifa and other distinguished royal guests, torchlight flickered, music swelled, and the pearl shone once more. Bahrain had not just opened the Games; it had opened its heart to Asia.
