WHO predicts 2 million deaths

TDT, agencies

Continue without collective action, and the pandemic deaths would sour more than double to two million, the World Health Organisation has warned.

The WHO warning came as the United States, the hardest-hit nation in the world, crossed seven million cases -- more than a fifth of the global total despite accounting for only four per cent of the world population.

"One million is a terrible number, and we need to reflect on that before we start considering a second million," the WHO's emergencies director Michael

Ryan said when asked how high the death toll could go.
