Brad Pitt endorses Joe Biden as 'a president for all Americans' in new campaign advert

Independent | Los Angeles

Brad Pitt has narrated a new campaign advert for Democratic candidate Joe Biden.

In the commercial, Biden is seen with his wife, Dr Jill Biden, on stage as well as meeting with supporters.

"America is a place for everyone," the Once Upon a Time in Hollywood star begins. "Those who chose this country. Those who fought for it. Some Republicans. Some Democrats. And most, just somewhere in between."

"All looking for the same thing: Someone who understands their hopes, their dreams, their pain. To listen, to bring people together, to get up every day and work to make life better for families like yours.

"To look you in the eye, treat you with respect, and tell you the truth. To work just as hard to work for the people who voted for him, as the people who didn't. To be a president for all Americans."

Pitt is the latest celebrity to lend his support to Biden's presidential campaign.

Among Biden's other famous supporters are Taylor Swift, Billie Eilish, George Clooney, John Legend and Chrissy Teigen, Miley Cyrus, Robert De Niro, Tina Fey, Bruce Springsteen, Tom Hanks and Rita Wilson, Dwayne Johnson, Samuel L Jackson, and Pitt's Once Upon a Time in Hollywood costar, Leonard DiCaprio.

Brad Pitt

Jennifer Aniston, Pitt's friend and ex-wife, recently shared an Instagram post urging her followers to use their vote "responsibly", as she also endorsed Biden.

Jennifer Lawrence says she confronted Anderson Cooper over Oscars fall accusation

ANI | Washington

Hollywood star Jennifer Lawrence has revealed that she confronted CNN anchor Anderson Cooper -- after he suggested she faked her famous fall at the 2013 Academy Awards.

According to Page Six, the 30-year-old actor recalled she was "very, very nervous" the night of her fall, which happened when she was collecting her award for Best Actress.

The 'Silver Linings Playbook' actor told Heather McMahan on the 'Absolutely Not' podcast, "My full brain went blank. I can look back at it now fondly but for a very long time the fall thing was very sensitive."

Lawrence said she was still recovering from the embarrassment when she heard Cooper musing on his show about whether she faked the stunt.

"It was so devastating because it was this horrific humiliation to me, that took away -- I don't know if I'll ever have the chance to give a speech like that again," Lawrence said.

Months later, she had a run-in with Cooper at a holiday party and decided to confront him, asking, "Have you ever tried to walk up stairs in a ballgown? So then how do you know?"

As per Page Six, the 'Red Sparrow' star said, "He apologized immediately, he was like, 'I don't know, I have no idea' and [gave this] wonderful apology. And I was all fired up."

Lawrence said he "probably told everyone that I was a psycho," but added that all is well now between her and the newsman.

"I think we're good friends now," she said.

Adele sings on 'Saturday Night Live' after all

ANI | Washington

Despite multiple assurances that she would focus on acting during her appearance as host on 'Saturday Night Live,' English singer-songwriter Adele burst into song several times during a spoof on reality dating series 'The Bachelor' about half an hour into the show.

According to Variety, the skit found the 32-year-old songstress, who was introduced as her superstar self, interrupting every bachelor-dating scenario by bursting into solo-with-pianist versions of one of her hits -- 'Hello,' 'Set Fire to the Rain,' and others - to the annoyance of the other women.

The skit concludes with her breaking up a final scenario by breaking into a brief but full-voiced finale of 'Someone Like You,' walking out into the studio the small, audience as they whooped and cheered. "Catch me next week on 'Love Island!'" she shouted with a smile at the end.

Adele said in an Instagram post announcing her hosting spot, "I am beside myself that H.E.R will be the musical guest!! I love her SO much I can't wait to melt into a flaming hot mess when she performs, then confuses myself while I laugh my arse off in between it all." (The fast-rising R&B singer H.E.R. was indeed excellent during her two performances.)

During her opening monologue, Adele had even said that she wouldn't sing on the show, explaining that her long-awaited follow-up to her blockbuster 2015 album '25' isn't finished, "and I'd rather put on some wigs, have a glass of wine or six and just see what happens!"

Britney Spears' conservatorship keeps her from marrying, having a baby, makeup artist says

Fox | Los Angeles

Britney Spears' life might look drastically different today if she weren't under a conservatorship.

Since her public meltdown over a decade ago, the star has been under a legal guardianship in which a conservator -- generally her father Jamie -- oversees her finances and everyday life.

According to makeup artist Maxi, the 38-year-old pop star would have possibly married and had a child with her boyfriend

Sam Asghari if the conservatorship didn't keep her from doing so.

Spears has been dating Asghari since 2016. She shares two sons with ex-husband Kevin Federline: Sean, 15, and Jayden, 14.

"I can tell you what they're still controlling to this day is whether she has a baby or not, whether she gets married or not, who her friends are, and those are some big things," said the makeup artist during an episode of the "Calababes Podcast," per Us Weekly.

They added: "We're talking about some 'Handmaid's Tale'-type things to keep her from having a baby. Like, we're talking... I can't detail it and I'm not gonna specifically say, but I will say for sure, she would've had a baby by now. She would've probably been married to [boyfriend] Sam [Asghari, 26] by now. She would have groups of friends around her."

American actor and talk show host Drew Barrymore recently opened up on her past struggles.

According to Fox News, the 45-year-old actor is known now as a lovable Hollywood star but has seen friction in the form of addiction, legal battles and divorce in years past.

During Sunday's edition of the 'Today' show, Barrymore discussed her divorce from Will Kopelman, which, as most of her life has, took place in the public eye.

The 'Charlie's Angels' star

admitted, "I really did not take divorce well. I took it really hard. But, the good news is his family and I sort of made the most important choice to be so together and united and connected."

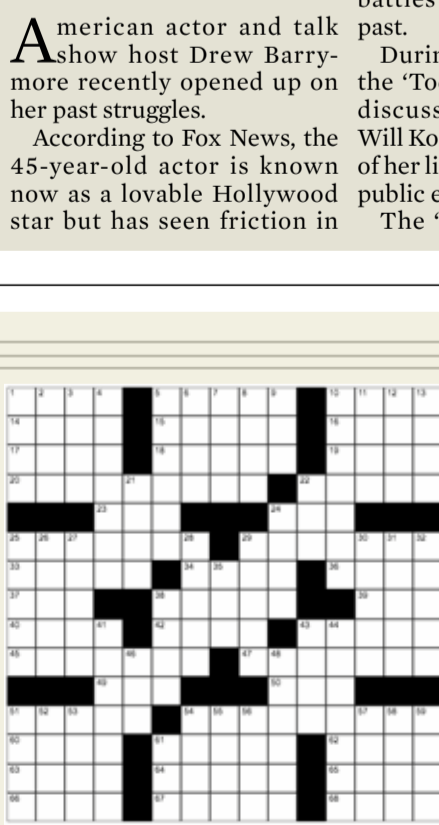

She added: "That's, I guess, what they call family. I know from not growing up with any family whatsoever that that was the last thing I wanted to do for my daughters."
